SENATORS VOTE 150 MILLION CUT IN RELIEF FUNDS

Roosevelt Rebuffed by Subcommittee.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's spending policy received another blow today when a senate appropriations subcommittee voted 8 to 3 to sustain the house reduction of $150,000,000 in the pending deficiency relief bill.

Senator Harrison.

The subcommittee recommended an appropriation of $725,000,000, the same amount voted by the house, to finance the Works Progress administration from Feb. 7 to June 30.

President Roosevelt had demanded $875,000,000, and the powerful administration lobby was assisted by the C. I. O., labor's so-called nonpartisan league, the Workers' Alliance, which is a communist organization of reliefers, the United States Conference of Mayors and other pressure groups.

Senate Approval Expected.

The action of the subcommittee, which is expected to be sustained by the full committee and the senate itself, gave Mr. Roosevelt his first senate defeat at this session of the new congress. It was a victory for the senate Democratic economy advocates, chiefly Senator Pat Harrison [D., Miss.] and Senator James F. Byrnes [D., S. C.], who did most of the maneuvering and missionary work to block the administration lobby.

A proposal to boost the appropriation to the $875,000,000 demanded by the President was defeated by what Senator Alva B. Adams [D., Colo.], chairman of the subcommittee, said was "not a close vote."

Then $725,000,000 was proposed. It was favored by Senator Carter Glass [D., Va.], Senator Byrnes, Senator Millard E. Tydings [D., Md.], Senator Richard B. Russell [D., Ga.], Senator Adams, Senator Frederick Hale [R., Me.], Senator Gerald P. Nye [R., N. D.], and Senator John G. Townsend [R., Del.]. Voting against the reduction were Senator Kenneth McKellar [D., Tenn.], Senator Carl Hayden [D., Ariz.], and Senator John H. Overton [D., La.].

Guard Against Discharges.

As an answer to Mr. Roosevelt's assertion that the $150,000,000 reduction would force the discharge of more than 1,000,000 WPA workers by June 1, the subcommittee adopted a provision requiring the WPA administrator not to diminish the present relief rolls by more than 5 per cent until April 1. Senator Byrnes explained that this would carry practically all of the 3,000,000 WPA workers now on the rolls through the ensuing winter weeks.

With the exception of this modification, the subcommittee retained the Woodrum amendment requiring the apportionment of the funds in such a manner as to make them last until the close of the fiscal year. To make certain that the funds will last until June 30, and to prevent a request for another deficiency appropriation, the subcommittee adopted a provision prohibiting any such request except in the case of an emergency which the President would have to proclaim and explain.

Fails to Explain Emergency.

The relief act of 1938, appropriating $1,425,000,000 for the WPA, contained a provision requiring the funds to last until March 1, 1939, except in the case of emergency. The President, however, was not required to explain what the emergency was, and he never did.

Senator Byrnes submitted figures which he regarded as proof of his contention that $725,000,000 would be enough for the remainder of the fiscal year. According to his figures the WPA rolls will have to be reduced gradually, after April 1, to 1,900,000 by the end of June.

"If we get the total down to 1,900,000 by the end of June," he said, "that will be about what it was at the depth of the last depression and in the dead of winter—January, 1938. There is no reason why it should be any higher in June, 1939."

The subcommittee adopted an amendment requiring the dismissal of any WPA worker who is offered work of a similar nature at the prevailing rate of wage in private industry.

'Gone with Wind' Author Finds Film Scarlett O. K.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Margaret Mitchell said today her increasing fan mail indicated southerners generally approved Vivien Leigh for the rôle of Scarlett in the film version of "Gone with the Wind." Writers from Ohio, New Jersey, Kansas, and Oregon joined two southern attacks upon selection of the English actress. However, they are in small proportion to the favorable letters. She declared Susan Myrick of Macon and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Kurtz of Atlanta, both southerners, retained as advisers by Selznick, are well versed in southern accent and customs.

BULL BLAMED FOR TRAGIC LIFE OF MRS. SIDLEY

Maid Backs Insanity Claim in Contest.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Racine, Wis., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley was incapable of even the simplest business transactions in April, 1938, when she made a will disposing of between 3 and 10 million dollars. This testimony was given today before County Judge J. Allan Simpson by a dainty, elderly little woman who for fourteen years was the personal maid and companion of the Horlick malted milk heiress.

Mrs. Mae Harrison. [Tribune Photo.]

The maid, Mrs. Mae Harrison, was the first witness in behalf of William Horlick Sidley, son of the heiress, who is attempting to have the will set aside. Mrs. Harrison is herself a beneficiary to the extent of $5,000 in the will she hopes to help break.

Her testimony was an amazing account of the influence over Mrs. Sidley of W. Perkins Bull, Canadian barrister and man of mystery, in whose Toronto home the heiress spent the last eighteen months of her life. Bull shares equally in the contested will with Mrs. Sidley's son.

Blames Bull for Trouble.

In her testimony under questioning of James Shaw of Milwaukee, attorney for young Sidley, Mrs. Harrison blamed Bull for:

1. Breaking up the home of Mrs. Sidley and her husband, Dr. John Streeter Sidley, in 1927.

2. The disappearance of Mrs. Sidley's furs, jewels, and valuable furniture.

3. The great unhappiness that came to Mrs. Sidley during the years just before her death.

Speaking in a low voice that was tremulous at times, Mrs. Harrison told of Bull's love making, his habits which she described as coarse, and the tragic last days of her mistress, whose mind she said failed almost completely.

She described the change that came over Mrs. Sidley in 1936 and her nameless fears of g men and phantoms lurking in trees, and her hallucination that every man she saw was her son.

Son Stares Stonily Ahead.

Young Sidley, who had declined to go to his mother in Canada during that period, stared stonily ahead during this testimony. On the other side of the court Michael Bull, son of the barrister, also stared unseeingly.

Mrs. Harrison's voice rose only once—when she said that the cars Perkins Bull forced Mrs. Sidley to ride in were uncomfortable and drafty. At home in Racine she had had two expensive American cars and one imported car, her former maid said.

Her voice was very low as she described the disappearance of the jewelry. It was in 1937, during Mrs. Sidley's visit to Bull's Toronto home.

"She was toying with her pearl necklace," said Mrs. Harrison. "It was a beautiful matched string. I understood it was worth $80,000. Suddenly it broke and the pearls scattered. Mr. Bull gathered them and said he would have them restrung. We never saw them again.

Other Valuables Mentioned.

"Earlier Mrs. Sidley gave him another expensive necklace to have repaired. He never returned it that I know of. She gave Mr. Bull the beautiful dining room table from her Racine estate. The Oaks. Her furs, glassware, and six Persian rugs were sent to his Toronto home. They are still there."

Mrs. Harrison declared that Bull was fond of the former Rosemary Baur of Chicago, who was married to his son, Bartle, now living in London. Bull persuaded Mrs. Sidley to send her valuable china to the young Mrs. Bull, the maid declared.

Objectors to the will contend that Mrs. Sidley's condition was the result of Pick's disease, a neurological malady that attacks its victims in their late fifties and results in dementia and death. It was her mental condition that was stressed today by counsel for the son.

'TICKETS, PLEASE!' IT'S GOV. STASSEN, GUEST HIAWATHA CONDUCTOR

The Milwaukee railroad's new eastbound Hiawatha streamliner today is to have a guest conductor—Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota. At 31 he is the youngest governor in the United States, and he also has had experience as a railroad conductor, working part time on a sleeping car run in 1928 and 1929.

Gov. Stassen, in a conductor's uniform, is joining the Hiawatha crew for one day as a part of the ceremonies opening the railroad's new morning service between Minneapolis-St. Paul and Chicago. Two new trains will supplement the present Hiawatha streamliners leaving Chicago and Minneapolis-St. Paul in the afternoon.

In Chicago Mayor Kelly is to preside at dedicatory ceremonies at 9:30 a. m. in the Union station. The train will leave for the Twin Cities at 10 a. m. The eastbound train leaves Minneapolis at 7:50 a. m.

BOSS, ON THE JOB 25 YEARS, PASSES OUT $100 BILLS

When the 120 employés of the National Office Supply company opened the 120 letters they received yesterday in the plant at 650 Genesee street, Waukegan, they found a $100 bill in each. George W. Morris, president of the company, then dropped in and told the workers he had chosen that method to mark his twenty-fifth anniversary with the company.

"I joined the company twenty-five years ago and my wages were 32 cents an hour," he said. "The company has been good to me and you have been loyal, faithful employés. I couldn't think of a better way to celebrate the day than this."

The employés couldn't, either.

Susan, the Black Swan, Parades 5 Little Ones

Susan, the beautiful Australian black swan in the Brookfield zoo aquatic house, was parading five little cygnets about her special quarters yesterday. The little swans were hatched early Tuesday from a special incubator. Now they are gray, but zoo officials expect them to have a nice black sheen like their mother's when they grow up. Susan was brought to Brookfield from Australia in 1934. She is 7 years old.

Spanish Loyalists Send 45 Tons of Gold, Silver to Paris

PERPIGNAN, France, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Seven trucks today brought forty-five tons of gold and silver bars from Barcelona, capital of government Spain, into France.

Tighten Purse Strings to Stop Relief Rackets

Purse strings on easy money for reliefers were tightened yesterday in several communities.

Davenport, Ia., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Marrying some one—any one—has been the easiest way for single persons to get on the relief rolls.

If denied relief because they lacked family responsibilities and seemed able to care for themselves, officials said, single persons have been marrying. Relief authorities then had no choice but to put them on the relief rolls. But the supervisors served notice that newly weds must wait a year before they can become reliefers.

Supervisors also voted to stop granting relief funds to persons with cars. Reliefers must turn in license plates or be taken off the rolls.

The supervisors explained that families on relief drive up in automobiles to get their checks and create a trafic problem. A colored bachelor was sent to jail for 30 days for camping on the steps of the office of County Poor Supervisor Marie Bauman when he was refused relief. When he got out he found a bride and collected.

Drinkers to Lose Aid.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Relief investigators today were ordered to remove from relief rolls all clients seen in an intoxicated condition. The order was issued by Supervisor Melvin C. Smith, Rockford township relief administrator.

Information must be supported by a sworn statement from the informant, Smith said. If the man involved has a family, he will be removed from the family's relief budget and his wife will get grocery orders.

"Relief clients who have money for booze have money for food," Smith said.

Jailed for Fraud.

Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Reliefer Granville Thomas, 20 years old, learned he could get twice as much money for groceries as a husband as he could as a bachelor. He announced he had a wife, and began collecting $9.18 food money every 15 days. But he hadn't a wife, Supervisor Harold Pillifant told Police Magistrate Clarence Brown today. The magistrate sentenced Thomas to 40 days in jail.

Reliefers Fill Hotel.

Tecumseh, Mich., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Vincent Dudas of Cleveland complained today that his Tecumseh hotel building, which he had thought was vacant, has been used by a relief agency to house 31 persons for five years. He presented village and county officials a rent bill for $6,085.

HOBO CAT TO COME BACK HOME IN STYLE, RIDING THE CUSHIONS

Peru, Ind., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Tabby, the rod riding cat, will be returned here tomorrow to its owner, Kay Karel, 2 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Metzger—but this time Tabby will ride in style, Wabash railroad officials said. The child's parents, after reading a newspaper story of a cat which was taken from a westbound freight train in Decatur, Ill., asked the railroad to return what they believed was Kay's pet.

Jailed for Tipsy Driving, He Tries Horse; Gets Prison

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Ivan L. Davis, 25 years old, who was charged with driving a horse and buggy through trafic at a rapid clip while drunk, today was fined $200 and sentenced to six months in prison. The judge was told that Davis, who pleaded guilty, recently completed a jail sentence for driving an automobile while intoxicated.

Jurors Free 3 Accused in $500,000 Plot

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

George [Bugs] Moran, a gang leader of prohibition days, and his two co-defendants in the so-called $500,000 forgery trial were found not guilty by a jury in Criminal court last night. The jurors deliberated less than four hours. The trial had lasted more than two weeks.

George [Bugs] Moran.

Acquitted with Moran were Frank Parker, known as the airplane bootlegger in the prohibition era, and Frank Hicketts, who once served an eight year term for murder. The three men were accused of a plot to counterfeit and cash travelers' checks of the American Express company, in particular one $50 check which was passed in a loop shoe store last April 21.

Nation-wide Plot Charged.

The state contended that when the alleged plot was nipped plans were under way to pass a flood of bogus checks in various cities. Thus the "$500,000 plot," as the case became known.

The case was given to the jurors by Judge James F. Fardy at 7:32 o'clock last evening. The verdict was brought in at 11:10.

The defendants, their wives, and their attorneys were elated at the verdict, although the defendants still face other charges in connection with the alleged forgery scheme.

"I certainly want to thank the jurors," said Parker. "Their decision was a just and fair one."

Moran and Hicketts echoed this sentiment.

The foreman of the jury was James E. Fisher of 2853 Archer avenue, a freight dispatcher. He refused to discuss the deliberations. He said only that five ballots were taken and there was always a majority for acquittal.

New Trial Planned.

Assistant State's Attorney Robert Wright, who prosecuted the case, said he would ask for an early trial on one or more of five other indictments naming Moran, Parker, and Hicketts.

"This verdict is a tremendous blow to me," Wright said. "I can't understand it. I thought we had an airtight case. I will certainly move for trial of the other indictments."

The three will be arraigned on the other charges in the same alleged conspiracy, Monday before Judge Fardy. Moran and Parker are at liberty on $35,000 bond each. Hicketts, unable to make bond, is in custody.

After the alleged counterfeiting plot was uncovered last April, ten men were indicted. They included the three on trial and Berger Hanson, Del Bruno, Emil Ahrens, Frank Quigley, Robert Sexton, D. J. Driscoll, and Carl Silver.

Three Testify for State.

Hanson, Bruno, and Ahrens pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the case and testified for the state. Hanson declared that he was the engraver.

Quigley, Sexton, and Driscoll were arrested in Pittsburgh, Pa., last April 21 when, authorities said, they tried to pass a bogus check there. They are now in jail in Pittsburgh. Silver has never been caught.

Chief witness for the state was Attorney Emile Van Bever. He testified that he spied on the three defendants, seeming to join their scheme while, he said, he actually was informing the police and the express company of the progress of the plot.

Van Bever's testimony was attacked by the defense. It was brought out that he has been disbarred in California and that he was on the pay roll of the express company since last April.

Other Indictments Pending.

The other indictments pending against Moran, Parker and Hicketts charge forgery of another travelers' check, cashed at a loop department store; conspiracy to forge and pass the check, and two indictments each alleging forgery of a New York Central railroad bond, and conspiracy to forge the bond.

If found guilty on any of the forgery charges, the defendants would face sentences of 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary. On the conspiracy charges they would be liable to sentences of 1 to 5 years, or a $2,000 fine or both.

Moran was represented by Attorneys Harold Levy and Arnold Harris; Parker by Attorney James Burke, and Hicketts by Attorney Roland Libonati.

PINS KIDNAPING OF UNION CHIEF ON HUMPHREYS

Sumner Tells of Big Ransom Payment.

Steve C. Sumner, labor leader whose 89 years have done nothing to dim his memory nor lessen his spirit, declared under oath yesterday that he had seen Murray Humphreys collect a $50,000 kidnaping ransom in 1931.

The testimony was given at a tax hearing in the United States courthouse on Lake Shore drive. Humphreys, once Chicago's public enemy No. 1, demanded the hearing on the claim that he did not owe the government $37,165 allegedly due in income tax and penalties for 1930, 1931 and 1932.

Before Sumner took the stand his associate, Robert G. Fitchie, president of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, had told about being kidnaped and writing letters urging that the ransom be paid. Sumner, who is secretary of the union, was appointed by the union trustees to deliver the money.

Points to Humphreys as Kidnaper.

After he had told of seeing a man pick up the package containing the $50,000, Sumner was asked if he saw that man in the courtroom.

Dramatically the aged labor leader pointed a long finger at the dapper Humphreys.

"That's the boy, right there," he said.

Humphreys, to whom the testimony was no surprise—Sumner had made the charge before—sat placidly under the scrutiny of Bolon B. Turner, member of the United States board of tax appeals, who is presiding at the hearing.

On cross-examination conducted by Edward J. Hess, attorney for Humphreys, it was brought out that Sumner was born in 1849. The witness maintained throughout that he could not have been mistaken in his identification.

Safe from Prosecution.

Humphreys is in no danger of prosecution for the abduction of Fitchie. Under Illinois law an indictment for kidnaping must be returned within three years of the commission of the crime. That period expired four years ago.

Also, he cannot again be subjected to criminal prosecution for filing false income tax returns. He pleaded guilty in 1934 to tax evasion and served a term in Leavenworth prison. The present hearing is to determine only what amount of tax he shall pay. The government contends that the kidnaping ransom is part of the unreported income.

Fitchie's story, which had never been told publicly before, aroused almost as much interest as Sumner's sensational charge.

Fitchie testified that he was a native of Scotland, is 74 years old, and had been president of the drivers' union since 1906. John D. Kiley, the government attorney, asked him to tell what happened on Dec. 21, 1931.

Four Men in Gang.

"I was kidnaped at 5 p. m.," he said. "I was on my way to my home at 642 North Lotus avenue. As I turned my car into the alley there I saw a car parked diagonally across it.

"Four men stepped out as I approached. They put guns in my belly. They told me to get in their car. I was ordered to put my head down and keep it down.

Q.—Did you recognize any of the men. A.—I did not dare try. One man told me if I raised my eyes he would blow my head off.

Q.—How long was the car ride? A.—An hour to an hour and a half. I was blindfolded in the car and when we got out it was dark. I was taken into a house and placed on a couch. All the time I was there I was kept blindfolded.

Fitchie said his captors ordered him to write a note to Sumner and to Ray Bryant, another official of the union. He wrote on a chair, he said. His blindfold was lifted barely enough to enable him to see the paper. Asked if any one was at any time visible, the witness replied that he had not dared look up.

Writes Three Notes.

Altogether three notes were written. Two of these messages were read into the record later by Sumner. In the first Fitchie related that he had been kidnaped and that it was up to Sumner to make arrangements for his release.

The second, written on Dec. 22, read:

"Steve—What I am writing is in all sincerity. I want to get out of my trouble today. I am satisfied the people who have me mean no harm if I go along with them. I made a bargain with them and want you to live up to it. This is no labor trouble. I will be released today if they get $50,000. Make no protest; ask no questions. Do not fail. I want to get out today. I can't stand this much longer. Follow instructions and you will see me today."

Fitchie said he was released about 8 p. m. Dec. 23. He was taken to Ogden and Damen avenues and left blindfolded, with instructions not to remove his blindfold.

He was asked if he had ever seen Humphreys. The reply was that he had never seen him until the present hearing began.

Sumner Relates Story.

Sumner was then called. He said that he had been with the union since 1902 as secretary and treasurer. When asked to state his age, he answered:

"I might have to look for a job some time, but I am of voting age and I've been in Chicago since 1879."

Sumner said he heard of the Fitchie kidnaping the evening of Dec. 21. He was downtown conferring with other union officials when the first note was delivered at his home, 7348 Constance avenue, and received by his mother-in-law. Al Richards, a business agent, delivered the note to Sumner in the Congress hotel.

On Wednesday, Dec. 23, said Sumner, he was instructed by telephone to go alone to 71st street and Constance avenue and pick up a letter—the second. He did this.

The same afternoon there was another telephone message. The caller told Sumner to take the money, get in his car alone in front of the union headquarters at 220 South Ashland avenue, and drive west in Adams street.

He protested that he might be held up, but the caller overruled the protest and told him to follow orders. With several cars following him, Sumner drove west to the vicinity of the McKinley High school, 2040 Adams street, where he parked his car. He obeyed instructions and walked north. The pupils were just leaving school and he mingled with them.

Two Pick Up Money.

"Then I climbed up on the school steps," said Sumner. "I was only about twenty-five feet from my car. The men who had followed me got out of the cars they came in. Two of them walked around my car and one of them picked up the money."

Q.—Did you recognize either of these men? A.—At that time, one. He was George [Red] Barker.

Q.—Where is he now? A.—He is in the cemetery. I understand he was machine gunned.

Q.—Did you ever see the other again? A.—Yes, in my office. He came to see me. When I stepped into the hall, he said, "I am Murray Humphreys." I said, "I have seen you before."

Q.—Where? A.—He was the man who went around the front of my car and took the money.

Sumner also related that he was sure the voice of the man who had given the instructions about the ransom payments was Humphreys'. He added that the interview in his office was several months after the kidnaping.

Later With Dairy Farm.

At that time, according to Sumner, Humphreys asserted he was in business with the Meadowmoor Dairies, Inc., and insisted that the union "lay off" unionizing his drivers for thirty days. He quoted Humphreys also as making a $100,000 offer to the union heads if they would surrender control of the union. The offer. Sumner said, was indignantly refused.

Earlier in the day Clarence Converse, an intelligence agent for the bureau of internal revenue, testified that Humphreys surrendered on the criminal charge of tax evasion only after Converse had threatened to prosecute Frank Nitti for harboring him. Nitti is the business manager of the remnants of the Capone gang. Humphreys has denied any connection with Capone.

Swings a Leadpipe and Routs Toy Pistol Bandit

A young bandit wearing a handkerchief mask entered Joseph Gutofsky's school supplies store at 19 South Spaulding avenue yesterday. "This is a stickup, get the dough," he yelled. Instead, Gutofsky struck the robber on the head with a lead pipe. The bandit fled, dropping his weapon. It was found to be a toy pistol.

In Horlick Trial

Robert G. Fitchie, president of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union, was kidnaped Dec. 21, 1931, near his home, 642 North Lotus avenue (1). The first ransom note was delivered to the home of Steve C. Sumner, secretary of the union, at 7348 Constance avenue (2) and the second at 71st street and Constance avenue (3). Sumner started from union headquarters at 220 South Ashland avenue (4) with $50,000 ransom and delivered it near McKinley High school, 2040 Adams street (5). Fitchie was freed at Ogden and Damen avenues (6).

SOCIETY WOMAN DENIES BEING ON COSTER PAY ROLL

New York, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Mrs. Charlotte Milburn Pickering Chesebrough, café society figure, was subpoenaed today to tell of her acquaintance with Philip Musica, the ex-convict whom she knew as F. Donald Coster. She also was to be asked if she was on the pay roll of McKesson & Robbins during the time of Musica's 18 million dollar speculations. She will go before a federal grand jury Monday.

At the home of her mother, Mrs. Anne Peabody, in Madison, Conn., she said she had known Musica for several years, had attended parties on his yacht, Carolita, but denied she ever had been employed by the drug firm he headed.

"I never was on the McKesson & Robbins pay roll. I never received any money either from the drug firm or from Mr. Coster. I knew him purely in a social way and I don't know a thing about his activities or about the affairs of McKesson & Robbins."

29 HURT IN BEER DRIVERS' UNION FIGHT IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 20.—(AP)—All Detroit police were ordered on twelve hour shifts as violence flared today in a dispute between two unions that has kept trucks of Detroit's major brewing companies idle since Wednesday.

At least twenty-nine men were injured, four of them by police clubs, as members of the teamsters union succeeded for the third day in preventing deliveries of beer in trucks manned by members of the Brewery Workers union. Two automobiles were overturned. Both unions are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

BULL IS BLAMED FOR TRAGIC LIFE OF MRS. SIDLEY

Maid Supports Insanity Claim in Will Fight.

now rests upon the objectors, since Judge Simpson ruled yesterday that Mrs. Sidley's will is genuine and legal in form. It is up to the objectors to prove that the heiress was of unsound mind and that she was coerced by Bull, as they charge. Shaw put the question of Mrs. Sidley's mental ability just as Mrs. Harrison's direct examination closed.

"In your opinion," Shaw asked, "had Mrs. Sidley, in April, 1937, a knowledge of her estate, the persons who were to benefit from her will, and their connection with one another; did she have the ability to hold this knowledge in her mind and view it as a whole?"

"No," replied the witness.

"Do you think she was capable of transacting such business as making a will?"

Mrs. Harrison shook her head, but her spoken reply was stopped by an objection from Attorney Ralph Hoyt for the executors. Hoyt was sustained.

Publishing Venture Revealed.

Mrs. Harrison revealed on cross-examination that Mrs. Sidley spent large sums financing Bull's endeavors in historical research. He employed a staf of twenty persons and privately published several books of provincial history, financed by Mrs. Sidley, said the witness.

Attorney Hoyt made an attack upon young Sidley, who was known to have been a source of worry to his mother. Although she defended the young man, Mrs. Harrison admitted incidents of intoxication, arrest, breach of promise suits, and brushes with police.

When Sidley's attorneys objected and were overruled, one of them shouted: "Go on; smear him, smear everything."

Asked whether young Sidley on one occasion smashed bathroom fixtures, wrecked furniture, and hurled butcher knives, the maid admitted the first two incidents, but said he did not hurl butcher knives.

"They were paring knives," she said. "As a boy he played a game of tossing them at a board in the kitchen. And he was not intoxicated."

Begins Her Story with 1924.

Mrs. Harrison began her testimony with the story of Mrs. Sidley's life in 1924, when she was the mistress of The Oaks, the beautiful mansion in Racine. The witness described her as an efficient housekeeper, a charming hostess, and an understanding mother to her son, who was then 13 years old.

"Mrs. Sidley kept the accounts of the house," said Mrs. Harrison. "Her mind was keen. She delighted in entertaining. Her clothes were beautiful and she wore them well. She was an accomplished pianist."

"I saw Mr. Bull for the first time in 1927 when he arrived at The Oaks as a guest of Mr. Will. [Mr. Will referred to William Horlick, Mrs. Sidley's brother, who had met Bull on a boat bound for England, had visited him in his London home, and had come to admire him.] Mr. Bull was a great bearded man, very hearty. He soon became the life of the house, practically running it. With him was his young son, Bartle.

Describes Change in Household.

"Things in the Sidley household were changed soon after his arrival. He was to have stayed a few days, but remained four months. Mrs. Sidley did not keep liquor in the house, but Mr. Bull demanded wines and spirits.

"He would come to the dinner table in his shirt sleeves and without collar or tie. He would say: 'Well, this isn't to be a dry dinner, I trust.' Mrs. Sidley then would order the wines brought on and Mr. Bull would drink heartily of the red, the white, and often of champagne. He liked cocktails and made many of them."

Soon, Mrs. Harrison continued, another and more disturbing change was felt in the Sidley mansion. Bull was causing friction between the doctor and his wife. The servants were sure Bull knew of it, but he appeared not to notice it, the witness said.

"One night Dr. Sidley was strolling through the house and chanced to glance into the music room," Mrs. Harrison continued. "What he saw angered him. Mrs. Sidley and Mr. Bull were in there.

Trip to Chicago Recalled.

"Later that night Dr. Sidley quarreled with his wife about what he had seen in the music room. Mr. Bull packed his things and moved—to the Drake hotel in Chicago, I learned. Mrs. Sidley then moved to her apartment at the Lake Shore Drive hotel, near the Drake. Dr. Sidley left the Oaks also."

Mrs. Harrison related that she accompanied her mistress to Chicago and there witnessed frequent meetings between her and Bull.

"They visited each other often," the maid testified. "Mr. Bull behaved charmingly, always kissing and hugging Mrs. Sidley and greeting her affectionately."

Soon after this, Mrs. Harrison said, Mrs. Sidley went east, and while she was gone Bull began gathering evidence to help her get a divorce, despite the fact that Mrs. Bull was still alive then.

On cross-examination Attorney Hoyt brought out that in the months that followed, Mrs. Bull spent much time with her husband at the Drake and that she and Mrs. Sidley became fast friends. Mrs. Bull was alive during the first three years Mrs. Sidley visited in Toronto, but died in 1934. She was not in Chicago immediately after Bull and Mrs. Sidley moved from The Oaks.

Divorce Obtained in 1931.

Later Bull also went east, meeting Mrs. Sidley in Atlantic City, Mrs. Harrison testified. Mrs. Sidley was then 50 years old. In 1931 she divorced Dr. Sidley. In that year began the protracted visits to Bull's home, Lorne Hall, at Toronto. Mrs. Harrison always acompanied her mistress.

Mrs. Sidley remained her gay, charming self until 1936, when her personality underwent a swift change, the maid said. She asserted Mrs. Sidley became forgetful and highly nervous and the nervousness quickly changed to fear. Mrs. Harrison's voice broke as she reached this part of her story. Tears rose to her eyes.

"Mrs. Sidley imagined she saw faces staring at her from the trees that surrounded the house," the witness continued. "'Come, Mae,' she would say, 'look at those faces.' I would assure her there were none. She would say, 'Why, Mae, you do see them; you know you do.'"

The elderly maid then testified that her mistress had iron screens put over the windows to foil gunmen she feared were lurking outside.

On a trip to Florida in 1936, said the witness, Mrs. Sidley paid Pullman porters $10 a day to stand outside her drawing room door. Once she sent a porter forward to caution the engineer against going so fast, the maid declared, adding that her mistress sat in the drawing room with the blinds down and lights out so that no shadow could fall on the curtains. Night and day she kept her Persian lamb coat about her.

"It's bullet proof," Mrs. Harrison quoted Mrs. Sidley as telling her.

Clash with Bull Related.

In January, 1937, the maid had her first clash with Bull. He demanded that Mrs. Sidley send her away, explaining that she should break all contacts with her old life, the witness said.

"He was emphatic," declared the maid. "He said, 'Either the maid goes or I do.' Mrs. Sidley sent me to California. After three months, however, Mr. Will persuaded me to go back. I stayed until the same thing arose again. Mr. Bull forced me to leave. It was his house. I had to go. I did not see Mrs. Sidley again until they wired for me a week before her death."

It was during 1937 that Mrs. Sidley began urging her son to go to her at Toronto, Mrs. Harrison said. He replied he could not, but Mrs. Sidley insisted on meeting trains three times a day, running along the platform to accost the passengers, said the witness.

"It was always the same," Mrs. Harrison testified. "Mrs. Sidley stopped men of all ages and said: 'Aren't you William Sidley? Don't you know me? I am your mother. Kiss me.'

Restaurant Incident Told.

"She was often insulted, but there were those who realized her condition and gently disengaged themselves. This went on for two months. Then we avoided the station.

"Once in a restaurant she hurried over to a deliveryman and said: 'William, I am your mother. Kiss me.' And though this young man was a truck driver, he was a gentleman. He realized her condition and spoke beautifully to her. Then he bent down and very tenderly kissed her."

Because Mrs. Sidley continually called to strangers the handles were removed from the doors of the car and the windows were fastened shut, Mrs. Harrison related. She said this was to prevent her mistress lavishing money on people she saw.

SUSPENDED AIDS VOTE TO IMPEACH HOMER MARTIN

Union President Names New Treasurer.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Anti-Martin members of the United Automobile Workers executive board voted tonight to impeach President Homer Marton.

The vote came at the end of a day of open warfare between Martin and enemies on the board of the union, which is one of the major affiliates of the Congress of Industrial organizations.

Internal warfare between Martin and the board has been raging since the board convened 10 days ago to curb him after he had ousted officials of a U. A. W. local union because he said they were under communist control.

Carry Off Filing Cabinets.

Martin and his men descended on union headquarters before opening time this morning and carried off a number of filing cabinets. He said they contained only correspondence, but his enemies said they contained the union's records.

Then Martin closed the offices and established headquarters in his hotel suite. There he announced the suspension of 15 of the 24 board members, including Treasurer George Addes.

The suspended members, barred from their offices, went into session in a hotel, where they voted to impeach Martin. They were joined by two of those Martin left on the board.

Charge Guards Are Beaten.

The anti-Martin forces charged that their guard, Nicholas Dragon, was beaten when the Martin men seized the filing cabinets.

Martin and his supporters issued a call for a convention of the union, to be held in Detroit March 1. Since the executive board last Tuesday called a convention, to be held in Cleveland March 20, there is a likelihood of two rival conventions being held.

Originally Martin demanded a convention for a showdown. The board tried to forestall it, but yielded. Martin charged yesterday that the board was trying to bar locals whose dues were delinquent in an effort to defeat him. Enemies charged that he took the records today that he might control the seating of delegates.

Names Houser Treasurer.

Late tonight Martin appointed Loren Houser of Detroit as treasurer. This was looked upon as a move to get control of the union's funds.

Incipient warfare broke into an open fight Jan. 7 when Martin ousted all officers of the Plymouth local here on the charge that they were Reds. When the board met, it reinstated them.

FALLS FROM BRIDGE; INJURIES FATAL.

George Grocin, 50 years old, 3219 East 92d stret, died yesterday in Berwyn hospital of injuries incurred Thursday when he fell from a scaffold while working on a bridge over railroad tracks at Cicero near Ogden avenue in Cicero.

SCHACHT FIRED; NAZIS PLAN TO INFLATE CREDIT

Funk Rules Finances and Economics.

BERLIN, Jan. 20. – (AP) – Reichsfuehrer Hitler today dropped his orthodox financial pilot, Hjalmar Schacht, from the presidency of the Reichsbank and gave the post to Economics Minister Walther Funk. Funk was instructed to bring the powerful financial institution under full Nazi control. The new Reichsbank head, who is 48 years old, was appointed for a four year term.

The dismissal of Schacht was seen in informed quarters as a forerunner of five broad developments in German economy:

1. Acceleration of credit inflation to finance Nazi rearmament and gigantic building programs. Schacht, who is 61 years old, opposed this course.

Seen as Blow to U. S.

2. Crossing off of the United States as a possible source of raw materials for Germany.

[In Washington, D. C., department of commerce experts said the change from Schacht to Funk had no real bearing on German-American trade. They predicted that Germany would continue to buy certain necessities in the United States. One high official, nevertheless, saw Funk's appointment as a slap at the United States. He said Funk was noted for his animosity toward the United States in contrast to Schacht's friendliness.]

3. Intensification of Germany's economic drive through the Balkans toward the near east and in South America.

4. Increased difficulties for American and other holders of German bonds in salvaging some of the money loaned to Germany before the Nazis came to power on Jan. 30, 1933.

Break Negotiations with Jews.

5. An end, for the time being, at least, to hopes of several hundred thousand Jews that they would be able to emigrate with aid of the intergovernmental refugee committee. Negotiations which George Rublee, American executive director of the committee, had been conducting with Schacht broke down after the Reichsbank president's dismissal when official notification was made that the conversations would not be continued.

Funk, in assuming control of the Reichsbank as well as keeping the economics ministry, thus united—under Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, director of the four year plan to make Germany self-sufficient—the important jobs of financing the Nazi government and selling its products abroad.

Hitler Thanks Schacht.

Schacht, who had the confidence of foreign bankers because they felt he spoke their financial language, once held this same double-barreled position until he quit as economics minister on Oct. 26, 1937. Funk succeeded him in the economics post a month later. Schacht has guided the Reichsbank since 1923 with the exception of three years.

In a letter to Schacht Hitler said he took "the occasion of your recall from office" to thank him for his services.

A statement announcing Schacht's dismissal said that in the future he would "be assigned to solution of special tasks." He will stay in the cabinet as minister without portfolio. The purpose of the change, the statement said, is the need for "a unified leadership of economic, financial, and money market policies."

Funk's Orders Outlined.

In a letter to Funk, Hitler ordered him to Nazify the Reichsbank "which was withdrawn from supreme sovereignty of the reich by the Dawes plan," and transform it "into a German bank of issue unconditionally subjected to the sovereignty of the state, in conformity with national Socialist principles."

This was interpreted by financiers as meaning that credit inflation would be jacked up to meet needs of Nazi expenditures. Such inflation, it was said, also would enable Funk to satisfy another of the tasks Hitler assigned him, namely to open up the money market so that private borrowers could get cash.

Funk also was enjoined by Hitler to safeguard "the absolute stability of wages and prices" and maintain the present value of the mark at about 40 cents.

Funk rose from being a newspaper economics writer to head the economics ministry after serving from 1932 to 1933 as a member of the Nazi faction in the reichstag before Hitler came to power. He has been chief Nazi economic adviser to Hitler since 1931 and also had a hand in setting up the Nazi propaganda machine.

Schacht Fights Secret Debt.

Last August a return was made against Schacht's will to short term financing. This had been abandoned in April in favor of obtaining funds through long term financing and taxation.

Rearmament, road building, and Hitler's determination to endow Germany with gigantic buildings had been financed through so-called work bills rediscounted by the reichsbank. These made up what is frequently referred to as Germany's secret debt, because the exact figures are never disclosed. Their amount has been estimated at between $4,800,000,000 and $6,400,000,000.

Schacht in April tried unsuccessfully to halt this ever growing secret debt and force private investors to hand over their money to keep the government running.

Expects Baby

MARY ASTOR.

Santa Monica, Cal., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Manuel Del Campo, husband of Mary Astor, film actress, said today they are expecting an addition to their family in "June or July." Marilyn Thorpe, Miss Astor's daughter by her first marriage, now is six and a half years old. A bitter court battle over her custody, with the actress' famous diary figuring prominently in the proceedings, was waged by Miss Astor and Dr. Franklyn Thorpe two years ago. The actress gained custody of the child.

TYDINGS LASHES ROOSEVELT FOR WPA SCANDALS

Hopkins Just "Front" for President, He Says.

BY CHESLY MANLY,

(Picture on Back Page.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Any doubt that the bitterness engendered by President Roosevelt's purge campaign in last year's Democratic primaries still lingered in the minds of his intended victims was dispelled in the senate this afternoon.

Sen. G. M. Gillette. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

The resentment of senators who survived the ill-fated purge boiled over in the debate on Harry L. Hopkins' appointment as secretary of commerce. Senator Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.] denounced the former WPA administrator as a "political termite" because of his interference in the Iowa primary. Senator Millard E. Tydings [D., Md.], however, bluntly told the senate that President Roosevelt was to blame for the political use of relief funds.

Insists Hopkins Acts on Orders.

"Why should we censure Harry Hopkins?" Senator Tydings demanded. "Is there a man in this body who does not know that Harry Hopkins did no more than was expected of him?

"I could be vindictive and take it out on Mr. Hopkins, but I am going to vote for his confirmation because I would only be getting at the man who was the 'front' of these political operations."

Senator Tydings told how President Roosevelt invaded Maryland "in his capacity as head of the Democratic party," but using a government automobile and dangled a $3,000,000 WPA Potomac river bridge before the voters' eyes.

Disgraceful Use of Funds.

"That," he said, "was one of the most disgraceful exhibitions of using public funds to sway an election ever heard of in the history of the entire world. I believe Harry Hopkins would have acted in many of the cases complained of if the green light had been given him to act. Certainly Mr. Hopkins did nothing so blatantly wrong as was exhibited in the case of the Potomac river bridge."

The Maryland senator recalled how some of his colleagues now on the side of the New Deal beat their breasts in righteous indignation when Frank L. Smith of Illinois and William S. Vare of Pennsylvania were denied senate seats because slush funds had been used in their campaigns.

"They are silent as a tomb now, although under their naked eye there was exhibited in this little state of mine a circumstance which makes the Vare election machinery look like 30 cents on the dollar. All that is done now is good and pure. The defenders of the sanctity of the ballot are all gone from their old accustomed stations."

Gazes Meaningly at Barkley.

As he said this, Senator Tydings gazed meaningly upon President Roosevelt's "Dear Alben" Barkley, the Democratic leader, for whom the WPA in Kentucky was converted into a political machine, according to the Sheppard campaign expenditures committee. Barkley sat with bowed head.

Senator Gillette said that "the last man on earth I would want in my cabinet is Harry Hopkins." Nevertheless, he said he would vote for confirmation because the President wanted him and it was the President's responsibility. Senator Gillette recalled that during the Iowa primary Hopkins said he would vote for Otha Wearin, the New Deal yes-man, if he could vote in Iowa.

"That list of proscriptions was prepared by a group of men whom I then designated, and whom I now designate," Senator Gillette said, "as a band of political termites, who follow the habits of that insect by boring into the foundation timbers for their own interest, in a subterranean and secret way."

Senator David I. Walsh [D., Mass.], a member of the Sheppard committee, said he would vote for confirmation, but didn't want it misinterpreted as indicating "any condonation of the vicious practices revealed in the report of the Sheppard committee." The senate is expected to vote on the Hopkins appointment on Monday. Not more than 30 senators are expected to vote against confirmation.

ROOSEVELT NAMES HIS MARYLAND HOST TO FEDERAL BENCH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The payoff for reluctant but dutiful support of President Roosevelt's disastrous purge invasion of Maryland came today to Representative Thomas Alan Goldsborough [D., Md.]. The White House sent his nomination to be United States district judge for the District of Columbia to the senate.

Rep. Goldsborough.

When President Roosevelt decided to invade Maryland last September in behalf of the candidacy of former Representative David J. Lewis against Senator Millard E. Tydings, who fought the court packing program, the White House notified Goldsborough that he had invited the chief executive to speak in Denton, Md., the seat of the Goldsborough family, which has been famous in Maryland history since colonial days.

Goldsborough hesitated over the command invitation, but finally to the amazement of his friends, not only issued the invitation but had the President to his home for luncheon.

REBELS CAPTURE 2 TOWNS VITAL TO FOE'S DEFENSE

Batter 3 Other Key Points on "Mystery Line."

HENDAYE, France [At the Spanish Frontier], Jan. 20.—(AP)—Spanish insurgents announced in quick succession tonight the capture of Igualada and Vendrell, two towns of high military importance to the Barcelona defense lines in eastern Spain.

Igualada was one of four main keys to the government "mystery line" of defense, and Vendrell was a government outpost and control point for coastal highway trafic leading to Villanueva and Villafranca.

The fall of Vendrell, thirty-two miles southwest of Barcelona near the Mediterranean coast, was reported shortly after the insurgents announced another force had taken Igualada, industrial center of 10,000.

Communications Cut.

Igualada is 28 miles northwest of Barcelona. Its capture cuts the government's main north and south line of communication, which ran just behind the full length of government fortifications.

[Insurgent reports received in Lerida, behind the insurgent line, said a force of rebel troops captured the village of La Llacuna, fifteen miles due south of Igualada, and pushed to within twenty-six miles of Barcelona. A government communique made no mention of the reported capture of Igualada.]

Other main defense points are Manresa, northeast of Igualada and northwest of the capital; Villafranca, south of Igualada, and Villanueva, on the Mediterranean coast south of Villafranca. A rebel force, using tanks and artillery, has been directed against each of these points.

Calaf Is Captured.

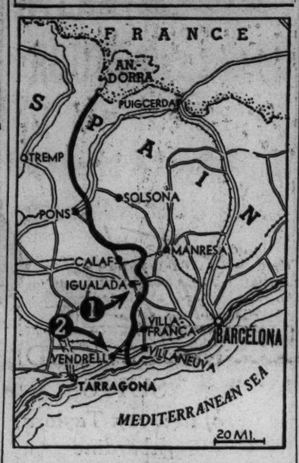
The rebel force aiming at Manresa reported capture of the communications center of Calaf, forty-five miles northwest of Barcelona. The insurgents still were ten miles west of Manresa, but capture of Calaf and nearby Sampere represented a six mile advance, bringing the insurgents almost within artillery range of the main highway for supplies from the French border to Barcelona through Manresa. Calaf is fifteen miles west of Manresa.

Insurgent military headquarters said the fall of Igualada placed government forces at Villafranca in desperate positions. Villafranca is a main communication center for the southern sector of the government line.

The highway and railroad linking Vendrell and Villafranca were said to have been cut by insurgent artillery.

The roar of the insurgent heavy artillery could be heard in Barcelona. The government poured every available man into the defense lines and women were volunteering at the rate of 600 a day to take over men's jobs.

Cut Off Loyalists



Capture of Igualada (1) by Spanish insurgents yesterday severed the loyalists' main north and south line of communications. Vendrell (2) was captured also. The heavy line marks the battle front, the loyalist area at right (east) and the rebel territory at the left.

PRESIDENT NOW FAVORS BILL TO FORTIFY GUAM

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt today announced his support of the $65,000,000 bill for naval and air base construction. This includes an authorization of $5,000,000 for the fortification of the Island of Guam. Yesterday the President denied that he had approved the navy's proposal to fortify Guam.

The President emphasized that the bill provides for an authorization and not for an appropriation. He said that an authorization does not mean construction nor does it commit the present or future congresses to translate the authorization into cash for the construction.

Mr. Roosevelt indirectly confirmed the belief that he is drawing attention to possible fortification of Guam for political purposes. The Japanese are much concerned over the proposal to fortify an island hardly 1,500 miles from Tokio. It is believed the administration hopes to get the Japanese into a conference which might bring an agreement under which the United States would drop any works at Guam if the Japanese would level fortifications in nearby mandated islands.

NAZI PARTY WILL TRY GOEBBELS FOR LOVE SCANDAL, PARIS HEARS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, German propaganda minister, it was reported here tonight, will be tried soon before a tribunal of the Nazi party, presumably because of the recent scandal in which his name was mentioned.

No confirmation of the report could be obtained, but it came from quarters which usually are reliable where German affairs are concerned.

Goebbels recently was reported to be involved in an affair over Lida Baarova, motion picture actress. He was said to have been beaten by friends of the actress' husband, Gustav Froelich.

FRENCH DEFENSE CHIEFS CANCEL NO. AFRICAN TOUR

PARIS, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Gen. Maurice Gamelin, chief of the staf of national defense, and Vice Admiral Jean Darlaw, chief of the naval staf, tonight suddenly postponed their scheduled departure on a tour of inspection in North Africa.

The postponement, which came in the midst of increasing French worries over Italian participation in the Spanish civil war, was not explained officially. Persons close to the foreign office indicated it might be for only two or three days.

It was suggested that the defense chiefs may have been ordered to remain in Paris for a possible session of the national defense council, or a possible secret session of the chamber of deputies for discussion of the dangers of a Spanish rebel victory.

ULSTER WARNS 20 MEN MARKED FOR BOMB DEATHS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 20. — Sir Richard Dawson Bates, minister of home affairs for Northern Ireland [Ulster] arrived in London today to consult officials on the series of bombings which have terrorized England for five days and to warn them to expect more bombings.

The minister brought a list of twenty prominent English and Ulster officials who, he said, were marked for assassination. He told officials here the list was seized in a raid in Belfast three months ago, when Ulster police unearthed a plot by the outlawed Irish Republican army for a terrorist campaign in January to support demands for a united Ireland. Ulster opposes a union with Ireland.

Sir Wilson Hungerford, secretary of the Ulster Unionist council, also reached London to complete arrangements for the duke and duchess of Kent [brother of King George VI, and his wife] to go to northern Ireland on March 7.

No new bombings were reported today such as those which recently have been aimed at public services, such as electric pylons [power transmission towers].

Poland Evicts 500 Czechs from Teschen After Row

TESCHEN, Poland, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Polish authorities today expelled 500 Czecho-Slovaks from the Teschen area, following an outbreak of border incidents. The Czecho-Slovaks were accused of attacking Poles along the border last Wednesday and again early today. Formerly a part of Czecho-Slovakia, Teschen was ceded to Poland as an aftermath of the Munich settlement last fall.

BOLIVIA SUSPENDS CONSUL NAMED IN BRIBERY BY JEWS

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The foreign ministry today said Herbert Lechner, a Czecho-Slovak citizen and honorary Bolivian consul to Prague, had been suspended pending an investigation of charges that he and others were receiving money from Jews who hoped to emigrate from Czecho-Slovakia.

It said a special tribunal would be set up to try cases of alleged graft in connection with Jewish immigration.

[Another Latin American republic, Paraguay, was reported on Jan. 14 to be investigating an alleged trafic in false passports for German Jewish refugees involving a Paraguayan consular official in Marseilles, France.]

U. S. WILL OPEN ATLANTIC PLANE ROUTE IN SPRING

France to Co-operate in Trans-Ocean Service.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—American planes will inaugurate regular passenger and mail flights to Europe before next June on the basis of a six month permit obtained from the French government, it was learned today.

Pan-American Airways has two trans-Atlantic planes in the water and three more under construction. The company completed experimental flights two years ago and is ready to begin regular service. The American Export Airlines, Inc., a subsidiary of the American Export Lines, a shipping company, also is interested in the permit.

French Deal Is Surprise.

The conclusion of a deal with the French government for trans-Atlantic service came as a surprise here. It had been believed that the American government was concentrating on negotiations with Great Britain for a reciprocal service, and that service with Great Britain would be this country's first Atlantic flight venture.

It was learned today that the state department began negotiations with the French government because American interests were tired of the stalemate in negotiations caused by the failure of British interests to keep pace with progress in the United States.

Negotiations with France also were pressed because they open a second trans-Atlantic route to this country. Under an agreement with Britain the American planes would have followed the northern route to the old world. Under the French permit American planes will end their flight at Marseilles, by way of the Azores.

Britain Delays Work.

When trans-Atlantic service over the northern route approached the practical stage the United States and Great Britain made an agreement for reciprocal operation of the route. Planes of both countries would have made a stated number of flights a week.

On the strength of the agreement, American interests rushed experimental flights and ordered planes. The British made a few experimental flights, but delayed the work to such an extent that this year found American interests ready while the British still were plodding along.

The agreement with France provides that the route will be operated on a reciprocal basis whenever the French are ready to begin trans-Atlantic flights. France began planning for a trans-Atlantic service by making one experimental flight over the route last year. Until the French are ready American planes will be the only craft winging the Atlantic.

HELD FOR FILING FALSE CLAIMS ON WPA FOR WAGES

Thomas O'Rourke, 2825 North Mason avenue, a WPA worker, was held to the federal grand jury yesterday on a charge of filing false claims that defrauded the government of $203. O'Rourke waived examination when arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. Bond was fixed at $1,000.

Martin Ward, assistant United States district attorney, said O'Rourke was employed as a delivery worker for a loop store while his name was kept on a WPA roll. He earned $70 a month from his employers and received $65 a month from WPA.

Ward said the deception was made possible by the help of Edward T. Ruff, a WPA foreman who now is a fugitive. Ruff was given $15 by O'Rourke, said Ward, to certify the false records.

SLAYER OF WPA BOSS SENTENCED TO 1 TO 14 YEARS

Benjamin Simons was sentenced to serve one to fourteen years in the penitentiary yesterday by Judge Benjamin P. Epstein in Criminal court. The judge deferred until Jan. 30 the sentencing of Walter Wielgorecki, who was convicted with Simons on Dec. 16 of manslaughter. Both men are 30 years old and live in Calumet Park. The two former Works Progress administration workers were found guilty of killing Charles W. Cummings, their project superintendent on Nov. 10 in Calumet Park city hall after he had discharged them for quitting early. Judge Epstein indicated he would hear a motion for probation on behalf of Wielgorecki.

WIFE OF SOVIET PREMIER NAMED FISH DICTATOR

Food Commissar Ousted in Russian Shakeup.

MOSCOW, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Paulina Zhemchuzhina, wife of Premier V. M. Molotov, whose success as manager of the soviet government's business in cosmetics was attributed to use of American methods, today was appointed commissar of the fish industry in the soviet union.

The appointment was announced in division of the food commissariat into three parts: fish, meat, and dairy foods.

Mme. Zhemchuzhina has travelled extensively. In 1936 she was the guest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the White House. She learned much from American industry.

Food Commissar Ousted.

In her new job Mme. Zhemchuzhina, whose name would be Pauline Pearl in English, will have charge of all fisheries, of transporting fish, of fishing canneries, and of collective fish farms—soviet fishing villages.

The new commissar, perhaps the only woman in the world entitled to sit with her husband in cabinet meetings, had been vice commissar of the food industry under E. G. Kabanorv, who was removed in today's reorganization.

Pavel Smirnov was named head of the meat commissariat and Vassily Zotov of dairy foods.

New Internal Trade Chief.

Alexander Liubimov was made commissar of internal trade in an appointment announced tonight. Sergei Chvialev remains foreign trade commissar.

Mme. Zhemchuzhina is in her middle thirties and has a son, eight years old. She brought American machinery into the manufacturing end and launched American style beauty shops in the larger cities to stimulate consumption of cosmetics.

SWEETIE PIE'S LITTLE FLOWER NOW HAS THORNS

Sweetie Pie learned yesterday that his one time Little Flower has thorns. Sweetie Pie is Richard Bower III., handsome department store clerk. Little Flower is Mrs. Vashti De Berry, a widow.

The romance between Sweetie Pie and Little Flower was told to a Municipal court jury last month. Mrs. De Berry testified she spent $7,500 on Bower, expecting him to marry her. She is 42 years old and he is 29. Bower married another woman. Mrs. DeBerry wants her $7,500 back.

The jury awarded her $757.30. Bower later announced he did not expect to pay. Moreover, he said, he never expected to go to jail for failure to pay. However, he erred. The jury's judgment contained a malice count. Yesterday deputies seized Bower and took him to jail. Sweetie Pie, it developed, paid the sheriff $3.50 for Bower's first week's incarceration.

Father Is Sued by His Son for Trust Fund Accounting

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Edgar D. Welch, 28 years old, of Oklahoma, filed suit in federal court today demanding an accounting of a $100,000 trust fund which he said his father, Frank P. Welch, established for him 20 years ago. The father, a resident of Rock Island, Ill., who is wintering at Miami, Fla., was named defendant. The younger Welch asserted in his bill that his mother, Mrs. Ruth A. Welch, filed a divorce suit against Frank Welch in 1919. The suit was withdrawn, Welch said, when his father agreed to the trust fund. Welch asserted his father had paid no part of the interest or principal.

DIAMOND THEFT SUSPECT IS HELD IN $15,000 BAIL

Riverhead, N. Y., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Socially prominent Foster J. Blakeley-Baseley, 27 years old, charged with the theft of a $600 diamond bracelet from Mrs. Muriel [Honey] Johnson Berlin, was locked in Suffolk county jail tonight in default of $15,000 bail.

The bail was set by County Judge L. Barron Hill at an arraignment late today, when Blakeley-Baseley waived examination. He was arrested last night in the theft, which occurred in 1934 at the lavish Southampton estate of the late Col. Henry Huddleston Rogers, oil millionaire. The bracelet was found in a pawn shop.

Held with Blakeley-Baseley as a material witness was a companion, who was booked as Theodore Lawford. His bail was set at $10,000.

presents here each day observations intended to be of value to those it seeks to serve.

TOLD AT TEA TIME

By CALEB

"YES, many of our customers ask that same question; and, after all, it is quite natural they should. 'Field's for Food' has become a slogan standby of thousands of people; and while some of them have been lunching, or pouring the afternoon Pekoe here for years, the majority have very little notion of our historic background details, so to speak."

"Suppose, then," I suggested, "we register a few in print." Nodding her agreement, the alert lady in charge of all Field culinary activities continued. "Our first tea room was opened before thousands of our present patrons were born—the week of April 14, 1890. There were fifteen tables on the fourth floor; our capacity at one sitting was fifty-six guests; and we served about 200 people daily. Eight maids were employed in that original room.

"As the years passed, increases in accommodations followed. I note from the record that they occurred in 1902, 1906, 1907, 1914, and 1921 . . . and today, of course, forty-nine years later, the scale of our food activities in service, facilities, accessibility, and capacity is 'in the grand manner' by comparison. Our present kitchen and service personnel, for example, totals several hundred people; and there are sufficient accommodations in our Walnut Room, Narcissus Room, English Room, Crystal Buffet, Fountain Dinette, and Men's Grill to serve close to 4,000 people simultaneously.

"I find men and women both are invariably curious as to the dimensions of our consumption figures. Recent averages indicate that our tea rooms used, in a single month, 10,200 pounds of butter, 2,600 dozen eggs, 22,850 pounds of chicken, and 3,215 pounds of turkey. During the Holiday rush our peak luncheon attendance ran well into five figures—the largest single day we have had since 1929.

"Maintaining quality on this enormous quantity basis," she smiled, "is a story you will perhaps wish to narrate separately. But maintain it we do—and the secret, if any, is simply one of efficient organization, plus the three additional E's of equipment, experience, and enthusiasm. Just think—in another twelvemonth, Field tea rooms will be celebrating their Golden Jubilee! And considering all the uncertain things that have happened in that span of time, an unbroken record of catering to food-lovers for a full half-century is something to celebrate—don't you agree?"

JAPAN'S PREMIER WARNS NATION OF NEW SACRIFICES

Foreign Chief Threatens to Bar Arms for China.

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 21 [Saturday].—Facing one of the most crucial periods in its history, the Japanese nation today was admonished by the leaders of its new government to exert renewed efforts to overcome domestic and foreign difficulties.

In speeches to parliament Premier Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma and his ministers of foreign affairs, finance, army, and navy, outlined the cabinet's domestic and foreign policies. They said they were determined to carry out wholesale reforms which will enable the country to push through a long term war and reconstruction in China.

All resources of the nation must be concentrated in order to attain the great objective of establishing a new order in east Asia, the premier warned. He urged the people to be prepared for further difficulties and sacrifices. Military power, he said, must be amplified speedily and productive capacity must be increased. He stressed also the difficulties to be met in conducting the current war in China and in establishment of a Japanese-Chinese-Manchukuan economic bloc.

Would Halt Arms Trafic.

An indication that Japan will act to cut off supplies now being sent to China by overland routes was given by Haehiro Arita, foreign minister, in his address.

He promised "proper steps" toward this end. His reference was to "the reported conveyance of arms through French Indo-China and other territories"—meaning, it was assumed, the Mongolian route from Russia.

"The Japanese government has from time to time called the attention of the governments concerned to the matter," Arita said. "When necessary, proper steps will be taken."

Recall Bombing of Supplies.

It was recalled that Japanese army dispatches Friday reported the bombing of Russian supplies which had arrived at Paoki, Shensi province, northern China.

Arita expressed also Japan's determination to protect "legitimate vested rights" in Russian fishing waters. This was a reference to the recent recurrence of the long dispute over the right of Japanese fishermen to operate in Russian waters. The agreement under which such fishing has taken place for years has expired and now is subject to renewal.

"While it is expected that the soviet government will negotiate with sincerity and that an ultimately satisfactory agreement will be arrived at," said the foreign minister, "Japan is of course prepared to take appropriate steps when it comes to the question of protecting her legitimate vested rights in this."

Denies Closing "Open Door."

Arita assured foreign powers again that Japan has no desire to bar them from trade in China.

"If we are to embark upon the creation of a new order in east Asia it will of course be necessary to enforce certain restrictions and regulations in spheres having a vital bearing upon the national defense and economic independence of the three countries," he said.

"But these measures will be confined to minimum requirements. Consequently there will be left open vast rights and interests of other countries and the commercial and other peaceful enterprises of their nationals remain absolutely unaffected, but in which foreign participation will be really welcome."

Arita, however, charged that "selfish motives" were behind opposition of foreign nations to Japan's "new order" in China.

Wins $1,000 from Tavern in Suit Over Son's Injuries

Mrs. Lena Ross of Carpentersville, Kane county, yesterday won a $1,000 award from a Circuit court jury in Geneva in her $25,000 damage suit against Fred and Harry Holze, operators of a tavern on route 20, about ten miles northwest of Elgin. The suit, brought under the dram shop act, charged that the defendants contributed to the intoxication of her son, Bernhardt Stabe, and that as a result he was permanently injured in an auto crash on Mar. 19, 1938.

[Acme Photo.]
MRS. MAE F. MARIN.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Asking $1,240 a month in separate maintenance in a suit against Film Director Lowin L. Marin, Mrs. Mae F. Marin was told yesterday by Superior Judge Benjamin J. Scheinman that she would have to get along as best she could on $200 a week. Mrs. Marin testified that although she aided her husband in advancing intellectually and financially, he deserted her last November and left her without means of support.

SEES ROOSEVELT AIR DEFENSE PLAN 20 YRS. TOO LATE

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Eastern Air Lines president, who was a world war ace, said tonight President Roosevelt's plan for a super air defense is impractical and "twenty years too late."

"Unless we build an air defense in harmony with the future," Capt. Rickenbacker said at a dinner in his honor, "we cannot achieve what the President hopes to achieve."

"The President's plan for a super air defense is twenty years too late," he said. "Who is to build the 12,000 planes he asks for? Who is to train the 20,000 pilots he speaks of?

"Before we could build the last thousand of the 12,000 planes the first 11,000 of them would be obsolete. We had that experience in the world war.

"We should have a competent board that would draw up the proper plan for our air defense, one in harmony with the future, and the 20,000 pilots should be trained by competent men with proper facilities."

'Soul Mate' Gone, He Pens Farewell Note; Ends Life

Ewen Denham, 30 years old, a radio technician, was found dead last evening in his room at 6026 Ingleside avenue, apparently a victim of poison. Near the body was a note which read: "This is the finish. I want to die. This time I will. I am not weak. But since they took my soul mate [girl friend] I do not want to carry on." Denham came to Chicago eighteen months ago. He has no relatives here.

JAPAN LAUNCHES DRIVE TO EXTEND GRIP ON YANGTZE

Cities Threatened as Two Columns Advance.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Slowly fighting deeper into the heart of China, two Japanese columns at present are expanding the buffer zone around Hankow, fallen Chinese provisional capital.

These columns are pushing westward and northwestward, again threatening cities up the Yangtze river, including Shasi, Hupeh province. This river port is 290 miles from Hankow by river, but only 200 miles cross country. It is 890 miles from Shanghai.

The two columns were reported today half way to Shasi after circling a vast, swampy area west of Hankow. Chinese military authorities said one of the columns was advancing from Tsaoshin, 100 miles due west of Hankow, moving northwestward to attack Kingshan, eighteen miles northwest of Tsaoshih. The other was said to be moving southwestward from the town and threatening Tienmen, about 25 miles away.

Chinese Retake Town.

Chinese reported they had recaptured the town of Wamiaotsi, eighty miles west of Hankow, after a three day counter attack which blocked Japanese forces driving through central Hupeh province along the Han river. Wamiaotsi was occupied by the Japanese Sunday.

In South China, the Chinese said, severe fighting was going on near Tsungfa, thirty miles northeast of Canton, with the Japanese still unable to organize their projected offensive into Kwangsi province.

A correspondent of Domei, Japanese news agency, with the Japanese forces in North China, reported an intensification of Japanese areial activity along the Yellow river and the Lunghai railway. The movement was reported to foreshadow an early Japanese offensive into Shensi province. The Japanese long ago invaded Shansi province, lying just east of Shensi.

Believe Drive to Be Renewed.

HONGKONG, Jan. 20.—(AP)—New indications were seen today that the Japanese were preparing to renew their military campaign in South China, possibly including attacks on Hainan Island and the town of Pakhoi, near French Indo-China.

Reports from Canton said troops were leaving Wongsha station throughout the night for undisclosed destinations to the north. Chinese reported Fahsien, twenty-five miles north of Canton, was captured by the Japanese after severe fighting.

A large Japanese naval concentration was reported at Weichow Island in the Gulf of Tongking. It was rumored the French were concentrating their far eastern naval forces in the Gulf of Tongking also.

AUSTRIAN CONVENTS ORDERED BY NAZIS TO BILLET TROOPS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—Orders issued by Austrian authorities that henceforth soldiers may be billetted in the premises of convents have shocked Roman Catholics. They say such a measure is unprecedented in the history of the Catholic church in Austria.

Among the convents ordered to accommodate soldiers is the Contemplative order of the Sisters of the Visitation. The St. Francis de Sales convent was notified that it must accommodate 150 soldiers for two years.

In some cases the convents maintained homes for Catholic girls. The girls were compelled to move to make room for the soldiers.

The authorities promised to pay for the accommodations.

CONVICT DRAPERY UNION LEADER ON DRUG CHARGE

George O. Roberts, president of the Drapery, Window Shade, and Tapestry Decorators' union, was found guilty in federal court yesterday on six charges of possessing, purchasing, and selling narcotics. Judge Charles E. Woodward heard the case without a jury.

Federal agents told how they raided Roberts' offices at 208 North Wells street and discovered narcotics worth $20,000.

Roberts denied he owned the drugs or that he had given 11 ounces of heroin to John Konig, an ex-convict described by the government as Roberts' north side jobber. Konig, on Thursday, pleaded guilty to possession of the heroin and was sentenced to three years in prison.

SWALLOWS CHICKEN BONE; DIES.

Vera Harris, 20 months old, colored, died in the Provident hospital early yesterday after swallowing a chicken bone in her home at 3301 Vernon avenue.

CHANDLER RAPS STATE BOARD FOR PAROLE FAILURES

Henry P. Chandler, president of the Chicago Bar association, declared at a meeting of psychiatrists and criminologists last night that the indeterminate sentence law is subject to criticism because Illinois never has had a high type parole board. The meeting was held by the Chicago Academy of Criminology at 185 North Wabash avenue.

Chandler made his charge during a discussion of individual methods of treating criminals. He said the indeterminate sentence law was passed with the intention of treating felons subjectively.

"Two facts stand out against the successful application of the law, however," he said. "There are no standards to determine when a prisoner should be released, and Illinois never has had a high type of parole board."

The bar president said he favored shorter criminal sentences and appointment of a porale board whose members would be psychiatrists and persons of judicial experience.

Dr. Hugh Patrick Leaves Estate Valued at $100,000

Dr. Hugh T. Patrick, noted neurologist who died on Jan. 5, left an estate valued at $100,000. This was disclosed yesterday when his will was admitted to probate by John F. Keeley, assistant to the Probate judge. The estate is to be divided equally by Dr. Patrick's son, Talbot, of Goldsboro, N. C., and a daughter, Miss Catherine Patrick, with whom the physician lived.

FLOWERS REALLY SAY AND MEAN "Happy Birthday"
Don't allow birthdays to slip by unheeded. Especially when, with a bouquet of flowers, you can really make them events of keenest joy. There is something about flowers that is so personal, so expressive, that the recipient never forgets the happiness they bring. The colorful beauty of a bouquet arouses the imagination and stirs the emotions to a point of high appreciation. Yes, flowers speak a language more expressive than the language of words. Send flowers today, and often. You will find them a gift that you enjoy giving.
BIRTHDAY SUGGESTIONS
From Your Florist
BEAUTIFUL, SPRING FLOWERS. Your florist has them in abundance now . . . fresh daily from Chicago's own growers: Iris, Jonquils, Snapdragons, Calendula, Carnations, Stevia, Sweet Peas, etc. A most thrilling gift for any occasion.
BOX OF ROSES. Send roses and you are certain to please, for there is no substitute for a rose. Yes, roses lead the beauty parade. Your florist has them in a wide selection of colors.
FLOWERING HYACINTHS. If you can't go to a warm climate these gorgeous plants at least make it possible for you to enjoy an early touch of spring beauty. Your florist has them in white, pink or purple.

ILLINOIS SPEAKER NAMES 36 HEADS OF COMMITTEES

KeepsRulesChairmanship for Himself.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Speaker Hugh Cross today named the chairmen of the thirty-six committees of the Illinois house of representatives. He retained the chairmanship of the rules commitee for himself. All of the chairmen are Republicans.

Reed F. Cutler, Lewiston, a veteran member, was made head of the executive committee and Edward P. Saltiel, Chicago, was appointed chairman of the judiciary committee.

As watchdog of the treasury—the term which is applied to the chairman of the appropriations committee—the speaker named Hugh Green of Jacksonville. Another powerful financial post, chairmanship of the committee on contingent expense, was given to Ira H. Streeper III. of Alton.

Schnackenberg on Parole Group.

Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Chicago, whom Cross defeated for speaker in the Republican house caucus, will head the committee on judicial practice and uniform laws, which will consider parole reform legislation.

Leroy M. Green, Rockford, former G. O. P. floor leader, was made chairman of the committee on efficiency and economy, and Clinton Searle of Rock Island heads the committee on elections.

Other chairmanships follow:

Agriculture—Denis J. Collins, De Kalb.
Banks and Loan associations—H. D. Sparks, Shelbyville.
Charities—Charles J. Jenkins, Chicago.
Civil Service—Peter C. Granata, Chicago.
Oil Conservation—Oral P. Tuttle, Harrisburg.
Education—Lottie Holman O'Neill, Downers Grove.
Enrolling of Bills—Abner Field, Golconda.
Drainage—George B. Allen, Braceville.
Fish and Game—Jack Palmer, West Frankfort.
Industrial Affairs—John A. Pelka, Chicago.
Insurance—Harry L. Topping, Kankakee.
License and Miscellany—Robert Petrone, Chicago.
Liquor Regulation—Michael A. Ruddy, Chicago.
Military Affairs—William J. Warfield, Chicago.
Motor Vehicles and Traffic Regulation—Arthur T. Broche, Chicago.
Municipalities—Elroy C. Sandquist, Chicago.
Parks—Robert Allison, Pekin.
Public Health—Frederick W. Rennick, Buda.
Public Utilities—James A. Nowlan, Toulon.
Public Welfare—Leo D. Crowley, Peoria.
Transportation—Warren L. Wood, Joliet.
Revenue—Everett R. Peters, St. Joseph.
Roads and Bridges—David Hunter Jr., Rockford.
Reapportionment—John A. Bingham, Gena.
Charitable Institutions—William J. Lawler, Springfield.
Educational Institutions—Elbert Waller, Tamaroa.
Penal Institutions—Harry M. McCaskrin, Rock Island.
Waterways—Robert M. Woodward, Chicago.

Former speakers named separate committees on banks and banking, and building and loan associations. Speaker Cross combined the two. He also combined all reapportionment committees—hitherto separated into judicial, senatorial, and congressional district groups.

Named Chairmen

(Story in adjoining column.)

Elmer J. Schnackenberg (left), appointed chairman of the committee on judicial practice and uniform laws of the Illinois house of representatives, and Edward P. Saltiel, named to head judiciary committee.

Report Third Indictment Voted in Police List Scandal

The grand jury was reported yesterday to have voted another true bill charging James Galvin, a fugitive and brother of Michael Galvin, slain labor leader, with conspiracy and confidence game. The grand jury is investigating bribe charges in connection with the police eligibility list. Two true bills were reported to have been voted against Galvin Thursday. Yesterday's reported action resulted from the testimony of Edmund P. Lynch, 1425 North Luna avenue, who claims he paid $750 for a police job that never materialized.

WARNS AGAINST REGIMENTATION OF U. S. DOCTORS

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Dr. Rock Sleyster, president-elect of the American Medical association, today assailed offers of "glowing promises of panacea that would regiment the medical profession and put it on a mechanized basis that in the end would cheapen the quality of medical services."

There is no emergency in the field of medical services and no justification for the federal government's proceeding against the association under the anti-trust act, he said.

Dr. Sleyster warned against what he termed propaganda, half truths, and unscientific survey, the object of which, he said, was to put the federal government at the helm of all medical service.

Rabbit Fever Victim Dies; Illinois Toll: 39 in Year

The thirty-ninth known fatality of tularemia, or rabbit fever, in Illinois during the last year was reported yesterday. William Scholl, 70 years old, 7353 South Morgan street, a retired baker, died in the Illinois Masonic hospital of the disease. Since the opening of the rabbit hunting season 250 cases of tularemia have been reported in the state.

WEYMERS PUT ON AN EXTRA ROUND OUTSIDE COURT

Earl M. Weymer, wealthy ornamental steel manufacturer, and his wife, Ann, whose divorce dispute has been in court for several weeks, had a new quarrel yesterday in the county building corridors.

The Weymers were leaving the court room of Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan after formal hearing on Weymer's cross bill for divorce had been set for Tuesday. Mrs. Weymer stopped to demand that her husband return her wrist watch.

"Wrist watch?" Weymer cried. "How about my dinner ware? I prize it highly, and yet you won't give it to me, darling"

"Don't you darling me!" retorted Mrs. Weymer. "You can't call me that after what you've said in court!" Weymer has testified that his wife went on parties with other men and that she was cruel to him. She charges him with being friendly with a 26-game girl.

Lawyers stepped into the quarrel, and the couple agreed to an exchange today.

HUNTING ACCIDENT IS FATAL.

IN THE PURPLE—AND THE RED.

Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to revive the Passamaquoddy tide harnessing and the Florida ship canal reveals his persistence, his great fondness for the feel of public money in his hand, and the imperialism of his edificial mania.

These are significant revelations containing proof that so long as Mr. Roosevelt can control the nation's affairs there will be no lessons learned from experiences, however bitter, no warning taken from advisers, however wise, and no deviation from the fixed purpose to spend the country to ruin and leave it the prey of whatever desperate revolutionary changes a despairing people might adopt because everything substantial and long cherished had been swept out from under their feet.

Both the Passamaquoddy and the Florida projects have been condemned by the engineers and the commercial interests concerned with them. They were started at a time when Mr. Roosevelt's wish was the law of congress, but after 5 million dollars had been sunk in the Florida ditch, which was to cost 200 millions, and 7 millions on the coast of Maine where 40 millions was to have been spent, the congressmen balked and refused to appropriate any more.

Florida, much as it welcomes federal money, was divided on the canal question, many of the citizens fearing that injuries and no benefits would result. Maine went Republican even while the New Deal was trying to float votes in on the tide. Passamaquoddy has been condemned as ridiculous on several counts. A steam plant would develop the same power at one-third the construction cost, when and if there should be a market for it, which there was not.

When congress refused to play the fool any further with these two enterprises it was supposed that they would be dropped. The country would pocket the loss and forget it. But it is not Mr. Roosevelt's nature to accept a defeat. He will return to the battle as soon as he sees an opportunity. His liking for edictal law, for royal spending, and imperial monuments was strong when he entered office and the years have increased it.

The land is being filled with the magnificence of his pyramids and temples. He can travel the country over and hardly ever be out of sight of towering concrete and steel built in his honor. The appetite for these sights feeds upon the seeing. It has apparently become insatiable. He must be a triumphant Canute with the tides and a greater Cheops with his piles of marvelous and useless concrete.

A celebrated lady, in awe at Grand Coulee, remarked: "I wonder who sold Franklin this?" No one sold it to Mr. Roosevelt. It was his own dream and he lived with it eighteen years before he was able to get his hands on the money to build it. TVA was another dream. Mr. Roosevelt has dreamed of dams and ditches, cities and valleys, armies and conquests, a country without courts, a representative system without a legislature, and a democracy with a supreme ruler and an obedient but busted people. He likes to accumulate all the gold and silver in the world and bury the hoard in the ground, just as a maharajah for his own delight stores the wealth of India in his treasure room.

To procure the treasure for the glory of the Rooseveltian edifices he has had no people to conquer but his own. He has not been able to invade Mesopotamia, Peru, Persia, or India for his spoils—as yet. The debts of his own country reveal the source of the wealth used to imitate the baths of Caracalla and the stately pleasure dome of Kubla Khan in Xanadu.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES.

Some weeks ago an editorial was published on this page commenting on the decline in the study of modern languages in the high schools of Chicago. The editorial suggested that youngsters might at last have reached the obviously correct conclusion that language study as it is conducted in our schools is pretty largely a waste of time.

A recent letter from Prof. Algernon Coleman of the University of Chicago, published in the Voice of the People, is somewhat discouraging. It seems we were too optimistic. The pupils today are no more intelligent than were previous generations of high school students. The decline in language study, as Prof. Coleman conclusively demonstrated, resulted from nothing but the superintendent's order limiting the number of subjects each child could take. The decline in language study was pretty closely paralleled by declines in other serious subjects.

Evidently, then, the pupils themselves cannot be counted upon to bring about the desired improvement. If any betterment occurs, it must be started from the top, either by the teachers of languages acting as a group or, if they cannot or will not take the initiative, by the superintendent or the school board itself.

The fundamental fault with language study today is that the standards of accomplishment in this country are set far too low. The purpose of studying French should be to learn to speak the French language and also to read and write it. The number of pupils who acquire these skills is so small as to be negligible. There is no excuse for our failure because in most of the countries of western Europe, as every traveler knows, the ordinary graduate of the ordinary secondary school has mastered at least one foreign tongue. He may speak it with an odd accent but he can speak it with considerable fluency, can read it easily, and understand it fairly well.

We can and we should demand at least as much of our schools and our teachers. Language teachers whose pupils do not measure up to the higher standards ought to be assigned to other fields for which they may have greater talent or training. In this connection it must be noted that the teacher who cannot himself speak German fluently and accurately is not equipped to teach German to any one else. There are no exceptions to this rule and it is only self-deception to pretend that there are.

American pedagogs have made important contributions to the technique of instruction in such subjects as reading and arithmetic in the elementary schools. The improvements resulted from a desire for higher standards of accomplishment. A corresponding insistence upon higher standards in language study may be expected to produce better methods of teaching languages.

TIME AGAINST THE DICTATORS.

This may be highly optimistic, but is there not fair reason to believe, even more to hope, that time is running in favor of the distressed peoples and against their oppressors, in favor of the peaceable nations and against the aggressors? For justification of the opinion there is the fundamental fact that the dictatorships are now contrary to the logic of history. They cannot represent stable human conditions because their success denies ordinary human aspirations. A form of government which rests upon coercion, upon police discipline exercised on every act and every thought, and upon repressions which oppose human instincts has not found a formula which contains its own preservation.

The dictatorships are degenerations. They are more than retardations of human progress. They are abrupt descents to levels of life from which there have been 500 years of evolution. If the contrary were true, if it were a reasonable assumption that tyranny represented a logical development in social order, then the plight of the democracies, as they are called, might be regarded as hopeless. But there is no logic in such an assumption. The alternative contains the reasonable idea and therefore whatever avoidance of disasters can be had for the time being in handling international relationships with the tyrants will be so much gain.

Not a great deal of internal evidence is obtainable from the countries under the terror. The work of the censor and the secret police is too effective to permit many disclosures, but in spite of this there is evidence that trouble is developing for the men who have made themselves masters of many millions of people now seemingly helpless and who are threatening the peace of the world. The progress of the purge in Russia, as related by Donald Day in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, is proof that Stalin does not trust his ability to kill his opponents as rapidly as he can suspect them.

The constant liquidation of army officers and the constant increasing of the number of secret police and provocateurs are evidence enough that the dictatorship of the proletariat fears the ground on which it walks. Even the Russians who knew czaristic government at its worst moments were never familiar with such a repressive tyranny. As a people they have always encouraged revolutionary violence. In Germany Hitler's régime is based upon such a fantastic conception of authority that we must believe the German people will become disgusted with a doctrin which holds that law is the spontaneous emanation of the Fuehrer.

Hitler's chief strength thus far has been in his politic treatment of the army, which under him has recovered its power and again is the institution which the German military man always thought was the real state. In gratitude to the little Austrian whose daring and determination made this possible the military caste has gone along with him. With its coöperation Hitler is safe. Without it he is destroyed.

It would be quite ridiculous to imagine that this proud military caste has any liking for the usurper or will feel the same about him when it realizes it has recovered everything it lost after the war, in the treaty of peace. Hitler knows his ground very well there and thus far has succeeded in keeping control, although it has required him on one occasion to butcher Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, the army head whom he suspected of a revolutionary design, and later to remove army chiefs whom he again suspected. He has not been obliged to shoot every colonel as Stalin has, but the German army, liking military rule as it does, is nevertheless no secure throne for Hitler. And the dissident elements in German politics which were so strong before he rose to power on their irreconcilable differences have not disappeared. They are only suppressed.

In Italy, where individuality is more alive than in Germany and political opinion more volatile, even under repression, Mussolini cannot possibly represent a permanent form of government. He profits from adventurism, but any one of these daring enterprises, such as the Spanish war, may result disastrously at any time, although he has been Fortune's darling up to now. He is violently hated in parts of northern Italy, and if Ciano is to be regarded as his successor there is nothing in the character or ability of that son-in-law to indicate that he is other than a Cromwellian Tumble-down Dick. Back of Mussolini is the royal family, the constitutional embodiment of state, even under the dictatorship, playing its hand cautiously and in spite of great difficulties maintaining its personal dignity and prestige.

Time, it can be repeated, will not prove unfriendly to the peoples who are horrified to discover the present tendencies in so large an area of what used to be the civilized world.

ANCIENT AND HONORABLE JESTS.

The Chicago items in Franklin J. Meine's exhibition of books of American humor, now at the Newberry library, are as follows:

"Walks About Chicago," by Poliuto [Franc B. Wilkie], 1869.

"Nye and Riley's Railway Guide," by Bill [Edgar W.] Nye, 1888.

"Brother Gardner's Lime-Kiln Club," by M. Quad [Charles B. Lewis], 1882. [Detroit was M. Quad's home town.]

"Peck's Bad Boy and His Pa," by George W. Peck, 1883.

"Culture's Garland," by Eugene Field, 1887 [published in Boston].

"Hell Up to Date," by Art Young, 1892.

"Stories of the Streets and Town," 1894; "Artie," 1896; "Pink Marsh," 1897; "Doc Horne," 1899; "The Strenuous Lad's Library," 1903; all by George Ade.

"Bird Center Cartoons," by John T. McCutcheon, 1904.

"You Know Me, Al," by Ring W. Lardner, 1916 [published in New York].

What, no B. L. T. items, which are fairly numerous? And no Line Books? O, Mr. Meine!

WINTER SCENE: L'ALLEGRO.

It's snowing, truly! Look! The ground is white
And winter's come at last. How neat and clean
The street appears beneath its blanket light;
How new and gay! For now are all things mean
Concealed from view. Soon will the sidewalks bloom
With children on their sleds, in green, blue, red
And orange caps and scarves. Snowballs will zoom,
And when you take your walk, do mind your head.
The staid old dog delights to roll and run,
Pretends to chase the sparrows. Now the boys
And men come forth with shovels. Well, it's fun
To play in snow; to fall in it annoys.
Where are the catalogues? It's time to lay
The plans for summer's joyous flower display.

The Great Gray City.

It is in winter that Chicago merits most fully its appropriate title as "The Great Gray City." The late Henry Justin Smith is believed to have been the first to apply this apt description. It is far more accurate than the more familiar reference, "The Windy City"—a misleading designation, for the wind blows more frequently and more strongly in New York and in many other cities than it does in Chicago. The "Windy City" label, by the way, was pasted on the town because of the enthusiasm some of its supporters indulged in while winning the grant for the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893.

In winter "Chicago gray" is the prevalent tone. And it is gray! To the less observing the color may become oppressive and monotonous, for it dominates the skyline and the sky and even grips the lake which usually keeps changing under the magic spell of blues, purples, and greens associated with marine marvels.

But "Chicago gray," deep, homely and work-a-day, as it is, reveals now and then a subtle variation, and the shade is an excellent back drop for the oriental reds and blues of old brick walls, the virile blacks of locomotive bodies and smokestacks, and for the lights that make a luminous Chinese lantern of the town. In winter the city is observed in its most revealing colors. Then come its most delicate gradations. Newcomer.

GEOLOGY LESSON.

(In the manner of Walt Whitman.)

I sing of mountains:
Mountains east and mountains west;
Mountains young and mountains old;
Mountains friendly and rolling; mountains grim and forbidding;
Haughty mountains, with heads lifted high in the air, scorning the earth-born creatures beneath them;
Humble mountains, brought low with age, submissive at last to the ravages of the aggressor.
The supercilious Rockies, snow-crowned, aloof in inaccessible splendor;
The gaunt Sierras, sun-scorched, sand-swept and wind-tortured;
The graceful, tree-tufted slopes of the Blue Ridge, with a mystical haze overhanging Georgia's Mountain of Stone, granite-gray, old as the ages.
Mountains are marvelous things, possessed of a myriad moods and emotions.
Dignified always, aloof from the world, cold and haughty in spirit;
To be admired, gazed on from afar, rather than intimately enjoyed;
Yet, like men, they often grow friendlier, less unapproachable, as they grow older.

Hamlet Said, "Words, Words, Words."

There are only two words in the English language which contain the five vowels, a e i o u, in their alphabetical order, according to Dr. Max M. Kuhin. He testifies that many years ago he was given this valuable piece of information. They are "facetious" and "abstemious." . . . Annie D. Fowler confesses that she has been lured into this search, and found nothing, unless she can be given credit for a word which contains the vowels in their reverse order. It is "unnoticeably."

ALLERGY IN CHILDREN.

ODD behavior on the part of the body — sometimes distressing illness—may come about because of the presence of certain substances to which one may be sensitive. Some of us possess a marked susceptibility to materials called allergens which may be absorbed through the skin, inhaled, swallowed, or injected. In this latter group vaccines, serums, and drugs are included.

The more we study the subject of allergy the more positive are we that about one-tenth of the entire population will be affected strongly by one or more irritants, while a still larger number will exhibit minor symptoms. Although this topic has been mentioned in earlier discussions, nevertheless further emphasis is needed at this time of year because youngsters especially are likely to display the phenomenon during the winter months.

There may be a hereditary tendency, which means the germ from the father or the mother may carry the trait. Fortunately many boys and girls outgrow the manifestation. In other words, after a time they will acquire an immunity to a given excitant, but they will not do so if overwhelmed repeatedly with the factors which influence them.

The most common dietary offenders are milk, eggs, wheat, cream, cheese, strawberries, nuts, chocolate, bananas, apples, celery, cabbage, cauliflower, tomatoes, spinach, and potatoes. Finding the culprit, however, may not be easy. If eczema appears, if hives break out, or if the child seems to be unduly peevish, one item after another may be left out until the guilty one is located. A quicker method perhaps is the employment of the "scratch" test. With a fine point, extracts are inoculated lightly into the arm and twenty to thirty may be made at one time. A decided reddening about one or more of the sites indicates susceptibility.

The "patch" test is a bit more delicate and consists in placing some of the agents in contact with the cuticle for twenty-four hours. If there is much itching the patch may be taken off earlier. The way is then pointed to the necessity of banishing the "reactors" from the diet or the surroundings. After a time small bits can be used again to determine whether freedom from ill effects has been developed.

A child bothered by milk may retain this characteristic for several years. On the other hand, he may overcome it within a few months. Articles of clothing should also be investigated. I have in mind a little patient who has outgrown a sensitivity to wheat inasmuch as he can now take cooked breakfast cereals without the slightest difficulty. He is still disturbed by wool, however. All of his clothing, therefore, must be made of cotton—not only his underclothing, but his suit and overcoat as well. Not long ago when on a visit to some friends he slept beneath a woolen blanket. Within twenty-four hours bright spots of eczema were observed on both cheeks. This gives the clew to treatment, namely, the removal of all offenders.

Now and then the starter will be so obscure, so hard to find, that it may be necessary to place the child in another environment.

In those instances in which the gastro-intestinal tract is upset with vomiting, constipation, occasional swelling and burning of the lips, sores within the mouth, loss of appetite, even abdominal cramps—we must look to the diet first of all. It may not be cow's milk—nor that of a nursing mother—but the possibility of this circumstance should be investigated if there is a strong history of allergy with either parent.

The important thing is to get past the period of great sensitivity, and usually a sedative will help. In the case of an infant it may be that he should be weaned if modification of the mother's diet makes no difference, as many such babies will gain normally on an altered formula made with condensed milk.

The reason we should get at the symptoms quickly is because many children will progress into the asthma stage if early treatment is denied.

CRACKED SKIN.

G. A. writes: For about a year I have been troubled with a peculiar condition. Where the right ear joins the neck a crack appears which heals in time but always returns. Some one told me it was eczema. What is your opinion?

REPLY.

Such lesions may be due to eczema or chronic infection. Keep the parts scrupulously clean and try to identify the starter, which may be an article of diet. Omit one food at a time and watch for improvement. Occasionally some chemical in a cosmetic will be responsible.

INFECTION POSSIBLE.

J. E. writes: Since an operation for fissure I have had a great deal of inflammation after each bowel movement. How can this condition be cleared up?

REPLY.

Rectal pain is usually due to irritation and resulting spasm of the sphincter muscles. The most common cause of irritation is infection. There is a possibility that some pockets have been overlooked. Surgical drainage is the only effective means of relieving the condition. Make certain that you are in skilled hands.

DIABETES AND MARRIAGE.

P. G. writes: Is it advisable for a woman of 27—with diabetes and low blood pressure—to marry? Would the offspring be affected?

REPLY.

There is a definite hereditary factor associated with diabetes. As a result, children born to diabetic parents have a tendency to the weakness. Your decision should depend upon the severity of the malady. If it is easily controled and the prospective husband understands the possibilities, let Cupid have his way. The low circulation pressure may be disregarded.

PROBABLY NONE.

Mrs. K. writes: One of my friends has four holes in the bone of her right leg. Is this from syphilis, tuberculosis, or leprosy?

REPLY.

In all probability none of the diseases you mention is responsible. The most common cause of infection of the bone is osteomyelitis. Tuberculosis is a possibility. Syphilis and leprosy play little part. The breaking down of bone tissue with resulting discharging pockets.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON—Those who see a swiftly developing tendency toward undisguised Fascism in Great Britain are carefully examining a new bill to regulate the production of milk. It has been introduced in parliament by the minister of agriculture, W. S. Morrison.

The bill extends a subsidy of $30,000,000 to the milk industry during the next three years and sets up a commission to reorganize the distribution of milk. The commission is designed to put the small milk distributor out of business and strengthen the big milk combines. There is considerable opposition to the bill.

The bill is designed to make the production of purer milk more profitable to the farmer and backs its purpose to the tune of $30,000,000 within the next three years. Actually $10,000,000 is provided, by way of subsidy, to the milk industry during 1938-'39—the payment operates from the beginning of last month—$11,500,000 for 1939-'40, and $8,500,000 for 1940-'41.

The producer of milk from tuberculin free herds will receive in practice a subsidy of 4.5 cents a gallon on his milk. As matters stand today, he is eligible for an existing subsidy of 2 cents a gallon, so that his total receipt from the exchequer will amount in the future to 6.7 cents a gallon.

This is the essence of the government's plan for the encouragement—one almost might say the renovation—of an industry which has fallen upon evil days; but the bill makes further provisions. It creates a milk commission, whose members will be nominated by the minister of agriculture and the secretary of state for Scotland, and will not be representative of the industry itself.

This commission will be assisted by a milk advisory committee, representing the industry's different branches, and the two groups will supervise not only the payment of subsidies but the industry's problems in general. Imports of milk and of milk products can be regulated. Evidently the government is satisfied that by 1943 there no longer will be necessity for the extraordinary subsidy and that the industry will have become prosperous enough to be content with whatever it gets, in the normal way, from the milk marketing boards.

Under the new plan it will be possible for a number of big producers to band together and apply to the minister of agriculture for a monopoly in one of the ten areas into which the country is to be divided for milk purposes.

If the minister issues the order, all who are not in the monopoly ring either will be bought out or pushed out of business, and forbidden to sell milk.

Any organization that can substantiate a claim to be able to supply the whole milk wants of an area will be able to apply for monopoly rights. The organization may be a cooperative society, a group of distributors, or even a municipal council.

There will be heavy penalties for those who try to break a monopoly by selling milk in a "protected" area. The ten areas to be chosen for the experiment will be representative of the various types of milk distributing centers—fair sized county boroughs, and so on.

There is a provision for parliamentary sanction for each of the experimental schemes before they become effective.

Object of the monopoly plan is "to obtain a more efficient and cheaper service" of milk. Compensation is to be paid to milk retailers who suffer damage—that is, who are driven out of business. If the scheme is found not to work there is provision for revocation of the monopoly order.

It is estimated that if the "experiment" is judged to have worked in the ten areas and is extended to cover the whole country, some thousands of small dairymen will be squeezed out of business, and the public will have no choice in the supply of their milk.

ESTATE PROBATE.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. My brother died recently, leaving a will which has been probated. I have been appointed executor of his estate. What is the legal fee an executor can collect from the estate? Two attorneys, who are partners, have been engaged to handle the legal matters involved.

2. What legal fees are they entitled to?

3. If a certain per cent of the estate, would that amount be based on what was left after all taxes and bills were paid or on the gross amount of the estate before any taxes, etc., were paid?

4. If, in the event that one of the creditors sues the estate for a claim which the executor refuses to pay, can the attorneys collect an additional fee for their services in representing the executor in court? H. T. W.

1. The Illinois statute says not over 6% of the personal property.

2. This is a matter of private negotiation between the executor and the attorneys. In general, we would say that the attorney's fee ought to come out of the 6%.

3. The 6% should be figured on the gross estate.

4. If the services are substantial the court would probably grant an increased fee.

WARRANTY DEED.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. About five years ago father had a waranty deed made out transferring the home after his death to the seven children. He passed away Dec. 16, 1938.

2. Must this be reported to the Probate court?

3. Can we continue paying the taxes under his name? F. J. W.

1. If the deed was not recorded, this invites contest as to whether it was legally delivered during the grantor's lifetime.

2. It seems likely that future purchasers will raise the question of delivery and, if you cannot prove delivery then probate would be necessary in order to make a readily salable title.

3. Yes.

OIL PROSPECTING IN ILLINOIS.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 16.—Under date of Dec. 23 in your Voice of the People column you had an article by A. L. Smithsen headed "Oil Prospecting of Illinois," dated Chicago, Dec. 23.

In this article Mr. Smithsen says, "Illinois has more wells drilling today than all other oil fields in the United States combined, and when you consider this covers Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, and Louisiana you will realize that Illinois has something to shout about, and we should be telling it to the whole world."

Undoubtedly a lot of people in Chicago and elsewhere read this article and believed it. I refer you to page 13, Jan. 16, 1939, issue of the Oil Weekly for the facts of the case. On Dec. 1, 1938, Illinois had 404 rigs in operation, while Texas alone had 1,135. On Jan. 1, 1939, Illinois had 372 rigs in operation and Texas alone had 1,098.

In addition, let me call your attention to page 21 of the Jan. 12, 1939, issue of the Oil and Gas Journal, which has a very interesting map of the United States with some accompanying figures. Illinois' discoveries in 1938 amounted to 198,581,000 barrels; while Texas' discoveries in 1938 were 622,653,000 barrels. Illinois' proven reserves as of Jan. 1, 1939, amounted to 214,470,000 barrels, while Texas' proven reserves for Jan. 1, 1939, were 7,499,462,421 barrels.

GONE WITH THE WIND.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—What a colossal blunder to choose an English actress to play Scarlett! She's never played an American rôle of any kind, much less an historical rôle of our own civil war. What a slap at our girls! England snubs our Wallis Warfield; she isn't good enough largely because she's an American. England repudiates her war debts to us nonchalantly, and now what a laugh they'll get that we have to import one of their actresses to play such a definitly American rôle. No wonder they think all we are good for is gun fodder to help them win their wars.

HOUSES OR A PARK?

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The sanitary district offers for sale a tract of thirty-three acres from Foster avenue to Bryn Mawr avenue and from Kedzie avenue to the north channel. They consider a bid of $56,000 from a private housing company. Do the taxpayers unfamiliar with this district realize what a steal such a sale would be? It has the following transportation: Kedzie avenue street car connecting with the Ravenswood elevated one-half mile away, Foster avenue street car bus connecting with the north side elevated at Berwyn station, and easy access to the outer drive or highways leading northwest. It costs the sanitary district nothing to hold this property. Are we to believe that the tax income from this development will relieve our tax burden?

The wisdom of earlier city planners who foresaw a future need for a park in this district will be realized when in the near future the Budlong Woods section becomes filled with apartment buildings. A more recent suggestion of a city planning group was that McCormick boulevard should extend as far south as Lawrence avenue. The drive now ends at Devon. The park plan seems to fit this district most suitably, but it it cannot be realized why can't McCormick boulevard be extended about one-half mile from Devon avenue to Foster avenue or all the way to Lawrence avenue, using the sanitary district's right of way along the channel?

Doesn't it seem that the public should benefit from either of these two plans instead of allowing this land grab to be consummated? NORTH PARKER.

36 GRADS LEAVE CRANE; 18 GO TO FULL TIME JOBS

First Vocational Group of Chicago Schools.

Thirty-six young men, members of Chicago's first high school vocational training class, were graduated yesterday from Crane Technical High school. On Monday eighteen of them step into full time jobs. Several others have secured part time employment. The rest expect placement soon.

The full time workers were members of the foundry classes. The others were trained for the electrical trades. They are the initial product of a new program of coöperation between the board of education and industry which seeks to train young people for the business world.

Class Time Divided.

Each pupil spent two years in a general technical course. In his last two years each boy devoted half of his class time to his special field. At the head of the classes were teachers trained for teaching students practical aspects of foundry and electrical work. The American Foundrymen's association aided in formulating schedules and procedure and in arranging to hire the students after graduation.

The other half of the class hours were devoted to inter-related subjects. These were so designed, according to Alexander Sullivan, director of vocational education for the board, that if the graduate wanted to carry on with his technical training in college, his credits would be acceptable.

Teach Variety of Subjects.

Half of the vocational teachers' salaries are paid by the federal government under the Smith-Hughes act of 1917. Sullivan said there are now about 6,000 Smith-Hughes pupils in eight other high schools. They are being taught air conditioning, dressmaking, architectural drawing, auto shop, aviation mechanics, beauty culture, carpentry, cooking, photography, printing, millinery and tailoring. In each case their aim is to secure employment.

"Their work in the last two years serves as an excellent apprenticeship and the readiness of private industry to give them work shows the value of that vocational training," Sullivan asserted.

HUSBAND OF BANK THIEF NOT SURE HE LOVES HER

Francis Cornwall stammered and stuttered yesterday when asked if he still loved his wife, Hazel. She stole for four years from the bank where, she has said, she worked to give him luxuries. She is under a sentence of 1 to 14 years and he is on trial as accessory to her embezzlements. When Judge Walter T. Stanton asked about his affections he mumbled:

"Why, I . . . I'm not sure."

"Would you still be willing to live with her?" asked the judge.

"I'd like to think it over. I'm not sure," Cornwall replied.

Cornwall testified that he had known nothing of his wife's peculations. He said he never learned that she was stealing until she telephoned him in Chickasha, Okla., where he was manager of an ice cream plant, and said she had stolen $700. He admitted she had supported him for a period while he was out of work.

Earlier, Mrs. Cornwall, who was found guilty last December of embezzling $4,300 from the Western Springs State bank, testified she was sure her husband had known of her thefts.

RELIEF CHISELER WHO HAD $11,100 JAILED FOR YEAR

Otto Freitag, 58 years old, who got $1,000 in relief funds although he had $11,100 of his own, was sentenced yesterday to one year in the county jail. Judge Justin F. McCarthy also ordered him to make restitution. Freitag's cheating was exposed last October when the $11,100, which he carried in the lining of his coat, disappeared after he suffered an epileptic fit at Madison street and Racine avenue. He lives at 3338 Madison street.

Chicago Relief administration officials charged him with obtaining money under false pretenses. They said he told investigators he made a living by panhandling in Madison street. He and his wife, Adelia, 31, received relief each month from Oct. 4, 1935, until he reported his loss. Freitag told the court he had been saving his hoard for his old age. His savings have never been recovered.

BABY FOUND DEAD IN CRIB.

John Beard, 2 months old, was found dead in his crib yesterday, apparently suffocated. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Beard, 1722 Jonquil terrace.

In head colds, mucous membrane of nose and throat is irritated, puffed-up—air passages become smaller—it's hard to breathe.

'LOTTERY KING' GETS 20 MONTHS FOR TAX EVASION

Judge Spurns Wife's Leniency Plea.

Abraham F. Zimmerman, so-called "lottery king," was sentenced to serve twenty months in Leavenworth penitentiary and fined $2,000 yesterday for income tax evasions. Zimmerman was found guilty by a federal court jury a week ago.

A. F. Zimmerman.

Judge Philip L Sullivan, who imposed sentence, disregarded an appeal for leniency made by Zimmerman's wife, Sylvia, 32 years old. After the judge overruled a motion for a new trial made by the defendant's counsel, John Elliott Byrne, he asked Mrs. Zimmerman to step before the bench.

"I understand you called at my apartment last night but my doorman told you I would not see you," said the judge as the woman stood before him in tears. "What was it you wanted to tell me?"

Tells Judge She Is Destitute.

"Only one point that was not brought out during the trial," replied Mrs. Zimmerman. "Less than a year ago we had a baby, and I am expecting another. I don't know what will become of me and my babies, for we are destitute."

As she turned away Judge Sullivan said: "You have my sympathy."

Assistant United States District Attorney Austin Hall recommended that Zimmerman, who is 37, be sentenced to at least three years. Hall pointed out that Zimmerman, a former newspaper boy, had been convicted of evading taxes of $36,250 on an income of $363,000 for the years 1930 and 1931.

"I place Zimmerman in the same category with Ralph Capone and other gangsters," said Hall.

Allowed 5 Days to Appeal.

The judge then pronounced sentence. Attorney Byrne was allowed five days to file a formal motion of appeal. Zimmerman was granted his freedom on his original $20,000 bond.

While Zimmerman was in federal court yesterday Chicago police took custody of two men said to have been his agents in a lottery.

They are Abraham Brody, 37 years old, and Joseph W. Bianco, 40. Federal agents seized them Wednesday in an office at 640 North Wabash avenue where 10,000 lottery tickets were found. They were charged with selling lottery tickets and operating a confidence game.

Two Men Killed in Fire in Flint, Mich., Hotel

Flint, Mich., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—James A. McConnell, 91 years old, a resident, and Walter Mathies, 69, a caretaker, died today in a fire which swept the Lincoln hotel. Forty others, including ten women, escaped. The hotel, a three story building, is patronized chiefly by workingmen.

KELLY'S BATTING AVERAGE: .800 ON HIS 1935 PLEDGES

Mayor Cites Fulfillment of Campaign Promises.

Mayor Kelly, addressing a large group of women in the headquarters of the All-Chicago committee supporting his reelection, said yesterday he had been able to accomplish for the city 80 per cent of what he promised to do during his 1935 campaign.

Mrs. Bertha Van Wakeman, women's chairman, All-Chicago committee.

"In baseball language, that means a batting average of .800," the mayor said. "Large salaries are paid players whose average is .200 or .300, so I don't believe we've done so badly."

The mayor told the 500 women who jammed the headquarters in the Conway building that they should judge a candidate by what he has done.

"The record talks," he said. "I invite you to look over my application, experience, and executive ability.

"I was instrumental in the passage of the women's eight hour law at Springfield. I refer you to Miss Agnes Nestor of the Women's Trade Union league for the part I played in it. I take no particular credit for that because it was something which had to be done. We've got to take care of our neighbors.

"A sure cure for selfishness is to sit in the mayor's chair."

Praises Police Efficiency.

The mayor said he is against any increase in taxes—"here or in Springfield." He praised the morale of the police department, particularly the department's work in the speedy solution of moron attack cases.

"Chicago is safe to live in and to walk in," he said. "We can all be proud to live in Chicago."

The mayor made a warm reference to one of his running mates—L. D. Schreiber, treasurer of the Democratic state central committee and candidate for city treasurer on the ticket headed by the mayor. Schreiber is making his first try for public office and made his initial political speech to the women. He has been close to Gov. Horner and Charles K. Schwartz, Horner leader and state tax commissioner.

Women Take Part.

Mrs. Bertha Van Wakeman, chairman of the women's division of the All-Chicago committee, was chairman of the meeting. Among the women she introduced for brief talks was Mrs. Victor A. Olander, wife of the secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Federation of Labor. Mr. Olander also was present.

"We feel that every woman in Chicago is interested in Mayor Kelly's reëlection," Mrs. Wakeman said. "He is an efficient, understanding public executive."

JOHNSON DENIES POLITICAL MOVE IN NEW MAGAZINE

Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, denied yesterday that 800,000 copies of a 16 page rotogravure magazine publicizing public school work were distributed for political purposes.

Johnson said the publication, entitled "Half a Million Prepare for Life's Battle," was made in response to requests for his annual report and to acquaint the public with school work.

His statement was made in a letter to the Citizens Schools committee. Arnold R. Baar, committee chief, wrote the board of education asking that it censure Johnson and refuse to pay for the publication. Board officials said the total cost was between $10,000 and $11,000.

MESSENGER BOY DISAPPEARS WITH $33,600 IN BOSTON

Boston, Mass., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—George Derome, 18 years old, a telegraph messenger who faithfully delivered millions of dollars in stocks and bonds in the Boston financial district for more than a year, disappeared today with $33,600 in cash, securities, and certified checks which he had collected at several banks and investment houses. Police inspectors expressed doubt that harm had befallen Derome.

Hitler's Personal Adjutant Made San Francisco Consul

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 20. — Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, personal adjutant of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, today was named consul general in San Francisco. He will relieve Baron Manfred von Killinger, who was appointed to the foreign office in Berlin. Capt. Wiedemann, who is expected to leave for San Francisco early in February, spent several months in the United States in 1937. As Hitler's special envoy, he conferred with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain early in 1938 on the Czech question.

Miss Rorke is the first non-British subject ever to receive the medal, according to Capt. Thomas T. Gilroy, post commander.

THREATENS CASE AGAINST HINES IN SURPRISE MOTION

New York, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Judge Charles C. Mott Jr. reserved decision today on a surprise motion to dismiss the conspiracy count in the indictment against Tammany Leader Jimmy Hines.

Judge Mott asked for briefs, to be presented tomorrow. He probably will rule on the motion Monday, when he is to preside at the opening of Hines' second trial.

The motion was made by Lloyd Paul Stryer, Hines' attorney. Dismissal of the count would be a serious blow to the state's case. Lawyers said that without the conspiracy charge, which would entitle District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey to present a connected story to the jury, it would be difficult to prove the felonies charged in the indictment.

The felonies concern various lottery drawings by the Dutch Schultz gang, for which Hines is charged with being the political fixer. Stryker argued that the conspiracy count was outlawed by the statute of limitations.

ASK CODE CHANGE TO SANCTION USE OF WALL BOARD

A proposed amendment to the city building code providing that any material might be used on walls and ceiling instead of lath and plaster if it met fire and sanitation tests was recommended to the city council yesterday by the building and zoning committee. The purpose of the measure, officials said, is to insure that the code, which now provides only for lath and plaster, shall not be subject to court attacks as discriminatory.

Mayor Kelly appeared before the committee to urge passage of the amendment, which has been approved by the plastering industry. Under the amendment, a committee on tests and standards would administer the code and decide whether a particular type of wall board met the requirements for lath and plaster. These requirements are already set up in the code proper. The last seven chapters of the code were approved by the council on Thursday.

RECKLESS DRIVER GETS FIVE DAYS IN COUNTY JAIL

Edward Brillon, 8006 Maryland avenue, was sentenced yesterday to five days in the County jail for reckless driving by Judge Jay A. Schiller in Safety court. Brillon's automobile skidded into a group in front of 1619 West 63d street on Jan. 5. No one was injured. Joseph Wascak, 1514 North avenue, was fined $25 for leaving the scene of an accident at 59th and State streets.

Change Record to Show 'Fired' Teacher Resigned

The records of the J. Sterling Morton High school, Cicero, have been changed, it was learned last night, to show that Miss Irene M. Roland, a teacher, had resigned. They originally showed she had been discharged. Miss Roland recently wrote a letter to a newspaper criticizing the school administration. Because of insufficient postage it was returned to the school, where its contents were learned. Miss Roland's dismissal was based on alleged "unethical practice." She subsequently demanded that she be permitted to resign for the sake of her record and the future, inasmuch as she had announced months ago her intention to resign to marry.

MRS. GARRISON HEADS WOMEN IN COURTNEY CAMP

Club Leader to Push His Candidacy for Mayor.

Mrs. Dewitt J. Garrison of the 49th ward yesterday assumed direction of the women's division of the Courtney for mayor campaign. Mrs. Garrison has been active in Democratic affairs in her ward for years. She has been vice president of the Chicago Federation of Women's clubs and president of the Catholic Woman's club of Rogers Park.

Mrs. Dewitt J. Garrison.

She took over her duties in State's Attorney Courtney's headquarters in the Sherman hotel with the statement that she is supporting Mr. Courtney because "he will not use the appointive power of the city government to build up a corrupt political machine."

Assails Condition of Schools.

"The scandals surrounding the administration of our public schools cry to high heaven," Mrs. Garrison continued. "They have aroused every element devoted to the cause of public education. Mr. Courtney has promised to remove the schools from politics. Nothing could be of greater benefit to the children, teachers, and taxpayers than the elimination of politics.

"We must judge Mr. Courtney's promises by his record in public office. During the campaign for state's attorney he made many promises. He has faithfully kept them. Too often we elect men to public office on their promises—made only to get votes.

"Now we are going to elect a mayor on his record as a public official. He has given the taxpayers an honest, economical administration in the office of state's attorney. He has proven to the people that he has no allegiance with graft, crime, or corruption."

The Courtney camp also released a statement from Joseph D. Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, in support of the state's attorney.

Lauds Aid to Labor.

Keenan said the personnel of the union labor committee to elect Courtney was being completed and would be announced Monday.

"My personal contact over the last ten years proves to me that Thomas J. Courtney is a friend of organized labor," his statement read. "Throughout three sessions of the state legislature his actions and his record have been 100 per cent with regard to all labor legislation."

Clayton F. Smith, president of the county board, said yesterday that the inclusion of his name in a list of Courtney ward leaders, issued Thursday, had been done without his consent. He said he had been friendly both with Mayor Kelly and Mr. Courtney and had not decided which he would support.

GREEN PLEDGES PROGRAM TO END UNEMPLOYMENT

Dwight H. Green, Republican candidate for mayor, told audiences last night that if elected he will hold weekly conferences with business and labor leaders to help create jobs for the unemployed. Green spoke before meetings in five north side wards.

"I will drive politics out of the administration of Chicago relief," he sad. "I will stop racketeering and reduce taxes. I will work for adequate relief for the aged and needy.

"The unemployment situation in Chicago is worse than the average for the country. The big thing is to reëstablish the confidence of industrialists and business men in our government. The unemployment problem can and must be solved."

Belgian Premier Appoints His Uncle Foreign Minister

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Premier Paul Henri Spaak today appointed his uncle, former Premier Paul Emile Janson, to the cabinet as foreign minister. Spaak had held the foreign ministry portfolio in addition to the premiership since he took over the government on May 14, 1938.

THE MASSACRE Chicago's 1939 Trafic Toll

More than 98% of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

GIRL, 5, IS KILLED BY CAR IN STREET NEAR HER HOME

Joan Lippold, 5 years old, of 1208 Second avenue, Aurora, was killed last night when she was struck by an automobile in Summit avenue, near her home. Don Heria, a farm hand living near Big Rock, in Kane county, was the driver. He told the police he had not seen the child before his car struck her. He was ordered to appear at the inquest today.

Henry Pontarelli, 52 years old, 5530 South Parkside avenue, father of five children, died last night in the County hospital of injuries suffered last Oct. 15 when he was run down by an automobile at Archer and Central avenues. He was a veteran motorman for the Chicago Surface Lines.

Injuries suffered last Sept. 24 in a collision between a train and an automobile caused the death of Mrs. Lottie Kedzeyn, 52 years old, 6040 South Kildare avenue, in the University hospital last night. She was riding in an automobile with her husband, Anthony, 54, when the car was struck by an Indiana Harbor Belt train at 51st street and Pulaski road. Kedzeyn was not hurt.

Foster Neralich, 26 years old, 5115 Parker avenue, a printer, was killed early today and several bus passengers were shaken up when Neralich drove his automobile into a work street car and then swerved into a street car bus. The accident occurred at the end of the Irving Park street car line near Neenah avenue and almost in front of the Chicago State hospital, Dunning.

There were no automobile fatalities in Cook county during the twenty-four hours preceding 4 p. m. yesterday, and the death toll for Cook county since Jan. 1 remained at 71. Of these 58 were killed in Chicago, where 1,161 were injured in the same period.

TRIM PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX ROLLS $84,350,012

Paul Drymalski and Emmett Whealan, members of the county board of tax appeals, yesterday finished hearings on 7,492 complaints against 1938 personal property assessments. The board eliminated $84,350,012 from the original assessment rolls made up by Assessor John S. Clark. Clark's total was $612,135,427. The present figure is $527,785,415.

Most of the reductions was made by lapping off assessments of individual owners of stock in Illinois corporations. Whealan and Drymalski said such stock should be assessed against the corporations, not the stockholders.

Several months ago the board completed hearing on complaints against the 1937 personalty assessments. They reduced that year's assessed total from $781,607,306 to $640,587,927, a decrease of $141,019,379. There were 15,538 complaints against the 1937 rolls.

ALLMAN SHIFTS 2 LIEUTENANTS AND 6 SERGEANTS

Two police lieutenants, six sergeants, and fourteen patrolmen were transferred yesterday by an order issued by Commissioner Allman.

Lieut. John W. Buckley of the Sheffield avenue station, and Lieut. Henry H. Hanson of the Cragin station, exchange posts. The sergeants transferred and their new stations are William E. Hanrahan, Austin; Harry B. Deas, Wabash avenue; James P. Hackett, Summerdale; Edward Gallbraith, Chicago Lawn; James L. Oakey, Englewood, and Patrick J. Groark, Warren avenue.

The transfer was the second in a week. Last Saturday Commissioner Allman transferred fifty-eight men, including two captains, ten lieutenants, seventeen sergeants, and twenty-nine patrolmen.

There's Nothing Cheery in New Faulkner Novel

BY EDITH WEIGLE.

"The Wild Palms," by William Faulkner. [Random House, $2.50.] Published Thursday.

In his latest novel, William Faulkner tells a strange, powerful, intensely morbid story of two people who give up everything for a love that consumes them. There is nothing gentle, sweet, nor kind about this passion. It is like a primeval force that grips them in relentless fury.

A feeling of doom pervades the narrative from the very start, and there is about it all an unhealthy glow. The author sees his world in a greenish half-light, missing no grim detail, but always missing normality.

The story of the lovers is one theme of the novel. The other concerns a powerful Negro prisoner who has become so used to a guarded existence that even when, during a Mississippi flood, fate sets him free, he deliberately returns to the confining walls of his world, unable to face life on his own.

At no place do the two themes meet. The author uses them simply as contrast. One is written around two people who renounce security for love; the other around a man who chooses security above everything else life offers him.

Warm and Lively Tale

"Yoke of Stars," by Frances Frost. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.] Published Wednesday.

Those readers who found "Innocent Summer" a rarely sensitive and lovely piece of writing will want to go on to this new novel by Frances Frost. The first chapters are in the same vein, little Judy being enough like the child of "Innocent Summer" to be her twin.

But the tale doesn't end with her childhood. It continues through the "agonies, the confusions, the brief delights, the beliefs, and the betrayals of her youth" to her maturity and her life as a young mother and a composer of symphonies, and leaves her only as she faces the half century mark.

Judith York is a poetic, eager, life-hungry person. Her sympathetic imagination helps her over the barbs and bruises of her early years with a severe, unbending mother, and because she is blessed with understanding she loves the little New England town that is her home and overlooks its faults.

The author fills this book with such a warm, lively atmosphere that to read it is to step into the house where Judy lived, to hear her playing her beloved piano, and to know her children, Sally, Nicky, and Orrin. "Yoke of Stars" is a simple, sweet, homespun sort of story that will linger in your memory.

Psychological Study

"Danger Signal," by Phyllis Bottome. [Little Brown, $2.50.] Published yesterday.

In this new novel Phyllis Bottome makes a psychological study of the motives that lead a perfectly sane, intelligent young woman to the point of committing murder. The crime is halted at the very brink, not due to police detection but to a far subtler but as effective restraint—a new, enlightened understanding of herself by the girl, Hilda.

Providentially she comes into contact with a woman psychiatrist who saves the situation and not only helps Hilda to a new view of life and its problems but who meets the man she has hated and also, in a measure, straightens him out.

"Danger Signal" is the author's first novel dealing with psychiatry since "Private Worlds." Painted on a smaller canvas, it is not a dramatic as the former story, yet very human in its appeal and of especial interest to those readers who find the study of their fellow men, their motives, and their actions eternally fascinating.

Chekov Made Human

"The Sea Gull," by Anton Chekov, translated by Stark Young. [Scribners, $2.50.] Published Monday.

It seems that all these years we've been seeing Chekov "through a glass darkly," but now we see him "face to face." The revelation is breath taking and beautiful.

If you've had the good fortune to see the Lunts' performance of "The Sea Gull" you have been amazed that this play, written in 1895, is as fresh, sparkling, witty, and undated as though it were done yesterday. In large measure this is due to the remarkable "sayable" translation made by Stark Young. Theatergoers will be forever in his debt for his contribution toward making Chekov's work as human, simple, and understandable in English as it doubtless is in Russian.

In a fifty-one page preface to this published translation Mr. Young explains something of the difficulty of the task, which must have been enormous, as he consulted every previous English translation of the play and compared each with the original Russian before making his own. He gives many examples to prove his point that almost without exception the translators embroidered, beat about the bush, added and subtracted, but failed to put Chekov's simple Russian words into simple English.

I hope Mr. Young goes on and translates "Uncle Vanya" and "The Cherry Orchard." And then he might start in on Ibsen!

Two Books Offer Able Studies of Countries in Latin America

"Latin America," by L. A. Kirkpatrick. [Macmillan, $3.75.]

"Venezuela," by Erna Fergusson. [Knopf, $3.]

One of these fine books considers all of the Spanish influenced countries and islands of the western hemisphere; the other studies closely a typical segment of it. Prof. F. A. Kirkpatrick is emeritus reader in Spanish at Cambridge, and Erna Fergusson is an American writer and an authority on Mexico and Guatemala. Kirkpatrick is the urbane historian; Miss Fergusson the alert and articulate traveler.

The story of the conquest of Central and South America is not new. Prescott's monumental study still is supreme in the historical field and, in so far as Mexico is concerned, Stucken's "The Great White Gods" interprets history fictionally in the great manner. Prof. Kirkpatrick is no Prescott, nor is he Stucken; he is, however, a beautifully grounded, sensitive writer who brings together the bewildering mixture of elements which are responsible for the Latin America of today, and gives them their proper place in the immense story.

Miss Fergusson has studiously "done" Venezuela, which she says is potentially the richest country in the world. After a century of dictatorship, revolution, and oppression, this northernmost of the South American republics is finally emerging—largely under the leadership of its young people, who are brave but impulsive, patriotic but incalculable. The account of her journey is both fascinating and impressive. P. W.

Trio of Crime Thrillers

"Portrait of a Scoundrel," by Eden Phillpotts. [Macmillan, $2.]

"Mrs. Warrender's Profession," by G. H. D. and Margaret Cole. [Macmillan, $2.]

"That Dinner at Bardolph's," by R. A. J. Walling. [Morrow, $2.]

"Portrait of a Scoundrel" is a grim tale by a master of mystery fiction to be recommended only to the most hardened murder fan. It is a cold blooded recital of crime by the slayer, a brilliant introvert who deliberately plots his brothers' deaths in order to gain title and estates. There is no mystery—merely a narrative of what proves to be a series of perfect crimes. The slayer is never even suspected. It is a bitter, brilliant, but repellent story which the reader will be tempted at times to lay down—but won't.

Mrs. Warrender's profession is amateur sleuthing. As an unraveler of mysteries she is one of the quaint additions to crime literature. Mrs. Warrender is a Victorian type of old English lady, mother of an unpleasant private detective. She gently but skilfully solves several murder puzzles which baffle both the professional sleuths and her own son. The stories are well written, with good characterizations, plots, and backgrounds. It's to be hoped the old lady continues her sleuthing.

"That Dinner at Bardolph's" was R. A. J. Walling's first book to be published in America. Now, ten years later, it has been republished. It still ranks with Walling's best—which is saying a good deal—and is unsurpassed by few contemporary crime yarns in interest, speed, and plot. A. C.

American Race Horses

"American Race Horses: 1938," by John Hervey [Sagamore Press, $5].

The latest volume of the annual series called "American Race Horses" contains a highly informative account of the breeding, background, and performance of every thoroughbred which distinguished himself in 1938.

John Hervey, well known for his turf writings under the name of Salvator, manages to convey the feeling that he was there, watching the development of each of these animals from the time of foaling to the moment of triumph in some famous stake—as indeed he was in many cases.

In giving complete stories of sixteen 2 year olds, fifteen 3 year olds, and thirteen handicap horses, Mr. Hervey shows not only the familiarity of an eyewitness but also the initiative of a scholar in digging up and assembling all the facts pertinent to their performances. His work is a contribution of genuine merit to the history of the thoroughbred.

The volume, which contains 258 large pages, is handsomely bound, printed, and illustrated. It is edited by Peter Vischer of "Horse and Horseman." The photographs will be of interest to all admirers of the thoroughbred. H. B.

Corrigan's Own Story

"That's My Story," by Douglas Corrigan. [Dutton, $1.50.]

The engaging young "wrong way" Irish aviator has chosen the perfect title for his autobiography. "That's My Story," he says, and sticks to it!

But this is not merely a record of that incredible flight. It is the story of his short, hard, adventurous life; the tale of his little wagon—his "crate" hitched to a star. That star, the dream of being a great aviator, was personified in Charles Lindbergh, on whose first plane he had worked and who, taking delivery on his second plane, saw young Corrigan again, held out his hand, smiled, and said, "Hello, there; how are you?"

"That handshake," writes Corrigan, "was my inspiration to keep trying, because in my estimation Lindbergh was and still is the greatest character in the history of the world. Even greater than Lincoln."

With delightful naïveté and in his own words—ungrammatical part of the time, honest, straightforward—Douglas Corrigan tells his story. F. B.

History Given New Meaning in This Group

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

To say that history is improving would be naïve. To say that the presentation of history has improved definitly in recent years is satisfyingly true. And you can say it heartily after going through these volumes. Each of them is remarkable.

Lives Linked to Narrative.

"The Story of the United States of America," by Henry Thomas. [Doubleday-Doran, $2.50.]

Dr. Henry Thomas' approach to the story of the United States is refreshingly human. It has to be. He builds his narrative by linking the lives of the men and women who helped mold the nation and us. These links are so adroitly forged, one to another, that they form a vital chain from Franklin's times to ours.

You are reminded emphatically that we are not descended from an ancestry of saints. The rascals are there along with those who, thus far, have not been found out. Franklin leads the procession, as he should. There follow then, in rapid succession, Washington, John Jacob Astor, Jackson, Emerson, Brigham Young, John Sutter, Charles Sumner, Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, Fisk, Boss Tweed, Cleveland, Susan B. Anthony, Mark Twain, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, Jane Addams, the Wrights, and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

New Material on Texas.

"Texas Independence," by Col. Andrew Jackson Houston. [Anson Jones Press, $3.50.]

The son of Gen. Sam Houston has written the Texas history that modern readers have been waiting for. There is much new material here, taken direct from the archives of the Houston family.

Through documents and contemporary accounts he builds his story with startling vividness. The reader is appalled by the shocking cruelties and wanton massacres carried out at the order of the Mexican president, Santa Anna. No reader can remain uninspired by the stirring heroism of the hopelessly outnumbered Texans.

When, finally, their moment comes and they stream across the field of San Jacinto to exact their terrible vengeance, you are charging with them. It is the great moment of a great book.

Missing Chapter Supplied.

"Flight Into Oblivion," by A. J. Hanna. [Johnson, $2.75.]

"Flight Into Oblivion" fills in a long missing chapter in the fall of the southern confederacy. It tells in detail the flight of President Jefferson Davis and his cabinet after the capture of Richmond.

The mystery of the confederate treasury gold and what became of it is answered. The strategy used by John C. Breckenridge and Judah P. Benjamin to escape the country is revealed thrillingly and in full.

There also is an explanation of the events that led to the story Jefferson Davis was masquerading as a woman when captured. Students of the civil war and reconstruction days will want this book, which also is stirring readying for any one.

MERITISM
THE MIDDLE ROAD
By C. H. Burke

A Challenge to Thinking People

What's ahead for America? Will continued pump-priming get us out of our dilemma? Is currency inflation inevitable? How long before the next depression? Is the New Deal leading us toward Utopia — or ruin? Is there a sound solution to these important questions? Yes, MERITISM.

WHAT IS MERITISM?

MERITISM is a sane, economic philosophy, based entirely upon provable facts. Under MERITISM America would drive straight ahead to prosperity, better purchasing powar and higher living standards for everybody. MERITISM retains the worthwhile qualities of capitalism. It assures complete employment for all able and willing to work. It is the middle road to political liberty and economic security.

Pretty Coverall Aprons

WOMAN'S AND MISS' APRON.

Housewives like aprons that cover their frocks completely and yet are easy to put on. For that reason, we're presenting a pattern today that should meet with a general welcome. It's the type of apron that is completely utilitarian, yet manages to include a great amount of smartness.

It may be styled with round or V neckline. The sash may tie in the back or be brought around to the front again and slipped through notches and be tied in a bow. You may have one or two pockets on the skirt, which may be cut square or rounded. The armholes of the apron are cut deep enough for comfort.

The fabric selected may be light or dark, plain or printed. The cottons in the stores are offered in such a wide variety of delectable shades that you should have no trouble in finding just the material to suit your taste.

Style No. 3334 is designed for sizes small, medium, and large. The medium size requires 1½ yards of 35 inch material, with 4 yards of rickrack trimming.

Address orders for Clotilde patterns to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing ten cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Famed Expert on Swing Will Visit Chicago

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE committee in charge of the Emerson House benefit, to be given next Saturday, are admitting something we've long suspected but which never before to our knowledge has been stated publicly. That is, that professional cigaret girls sell more successfully at a benefit than the amateur lovelies every benefit committee organizes as cigaret or flower vendors. So, there will be no debutantes trying to swell the proceds of the dinner-dance at the Harvey restaurant next Saturday by wheedling gentlemen into paying exorbitant prices for cigarets.

The clever young women who have planned the dinner-dance have put over a coup that many older benefit givers wil envy. They have arranged for Hugues Panassie, considered by many swing addicts THE authority on swing in the entire world, to come to Chicago for the party. This Parisian, who wrote "Le Jazz Hot" and is in New York this winter, is flying out next Friday ostensibly to give a lecture at the Saddle and Cycle club on Sunday evening, Jan. 29. But those in the know realize that the young Emerson House directors are responsible for getting the club to bring him to Chicago just at the right time so that he can be a guest at their swing dinner-dance.

Cocktail Party for M. Panassi.

Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr. will give a cockail party for M. Panassie on Friday, and on Saturday night he will be with her and her husband at the Emerson House party. The Harveys are getting together a group to go to the Saddle and Cycle club lecture. Mrs. Harvey is not giving a large party Friday; she is inviting just those whose interest in swing would make them interested in and interesting to M. Panassie. Jimmy McPartland, leader of the four piece orchestra that will play in the cocktail room next Saturday, will be there, and so will Tom Merrick, leader of the ten piece dance orchestra that will play during dinner. M. Panassie publicly has expressed the desire to meet Jimmy McPartland, whom the swing authority has declared is the best white cornetist since the late Bix Biederbecke.

Mrs. Harvey's invitation list will include, of course, the swing committee that chose the music for the dinner-dance. On this committee are Mrs. Otis Chatfield-Taylor, Edwin M. Ashcraft III., Lloyd A. Laflin, and James C. Hemphill. Probably the six young girls who will act as jockies in a horse racing game at the benefit will be asked to meet M. Panassie, too.

The young Kellogg Fairbanks do not have to pay for their tickets to the party, for they received the one invitation that escaped the red ink at the printer's. The directors decided that since the price was not on one invitation the lucky persons who received it would be the guest of the committee.

Howard Fisher Will Wed Marion Hall.

Of interest is the announcement Mr. and Mrs. Percival Hall of Washington, D. C., have made of the engagement and approaching marriage on Feb. 11 of their daughter, Marion Ethel, to Howard Taylor Fisher, son of Mrs. Walter L. Fisher and the late Mr. Fisher of Hubbard Woods.

Mr. Fisher, who seemingly has been one of Chicago's confirmed bachelors, is a Harvard graduate. His sister, the former Ruth Fisher, and her husband, Charles Edward Rhetts, who were married last April, are living in Washington.

Miss Hall is a graduate of Goucher college. Her father has been president of Gallaudet college in Washington for the last twenty-eight years. Mr. Fisher's father was secretary of the interior under President Taft.

Miss Peggy Baldwin Will Become Bride.

At an eggnog party given recently in her apartment in New York Mrs. Frank Eugene Baldwin of Chicago announced the engagement of her daughter, Peggy, to John M. Holley of Chicago. Miss Baldwin is the daughter of the late Dr. Frank E. Baldwin and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lockwood of Chicago. She attended the Sacred Heart convent and was graduated from the Edgwood school of Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Holley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Milton Holley of La Crosse, Wis. He is a graduate of Hamilton college and is engaged in business in Chicago. The wedding will take place in New York in the late spring, where Mrs. Baldwin and her two daughters, the Misses Peggy and Helen, are spending the winter.

Miss Kittleman Bride Tonight.

Looking at Hollywood
By Ed Sullivan

Superstitions.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 20.—Once upon a time, as the story tellers have it, Leslie Howard was one gold sovereign from failure. The day that he was to spend it, he landed the job that led to permanent employment, so you can pardon his superstition in carrying it with him wherever he goes. . . . George Arlis wears a little gold pig on a heavy watch chain; in fact, he's worn it for forty years. Sentiment as well as superstition enters into it, because he bought it at London's Charing Cross station the day he was married. . . . Bruce Cabot spends the entire day in bed whenever the calendar hits a jackpot and brings up Friday the 13th. . . . Bette Davis will be delighted if it rains the night of the Academy award banquet, because she is convinced that rain brings her good luck. It rained the day she got her chance to play "The Wild Duck," it rained the night she won the 1935 Academy award.

On Spencer Tracy's keyring is a St. Theresa medallion, worn thin. He's had it ever since he played "Baby Cyclone" on the Broadway stage . . . Barbara Stanwyck is never without the cut gold medallion she wears on a ribbon around her neck . . . John Barrymore has one stick of black makeup "liner" in his kit, and has had it for so many years that he pastes it together with adhesive tape . . . Joe E. Brown carries an aged and shiny acorn as a pocket good luck piece . . . on all of Director Anatole Litvak's sets, you'll find a staircase with thirteen steps . . . William Wyler, on the first day of a picture, always plays a violin, the tune being a French lullaby . . . George M. Cohan writes and revises all of his plays, and studies all of his parts, in a chair beneath an autographed picture of the late President Wilson.

Webster, in his dictionary, defines superstition as "a belief founded in irrational feelings, especially of fear, and characterized by credulity." The performers refuse to be offended by Noah: They have their beliefs and faiths and superstitions and they'd rather have a good luck token, of tried and proved efficiency, than a copy of the dictionary . . . Bert Lahr's wardrobe trunk is still covered with the stickers and labels of the first Broadway show in which he appeared, and woe betide any one who tried to rip them off . . . David Niven, like most Scots, is afraid of nearly everything in the calendar of superstitions — ladders, black cats, broken mirrors, spilled salt. "To express it elegantly," says Niven, "I am a sucker for superstitions" . . .

Joan Blondell always uses a 10 cent basket for her makeup box. She bought it when she came to Hollywood to appear in "Sinners' Holiday" with Jim Cagney and has used it ever since. . . . On the third day of every stage show or picture, Fred Astaire has his dresser lay out a plaid robe that he bought years ago when he was playing in vaudeville at the Poli theater in Bridgeport, Conn. The matinée show went extra big, so Astaire got the hunch that the plaid dressing gown was a luck-bringer. . . . Director William Dieterle is not superstitious, but he won't make a movie without the advice of an astrologer. He was warned once not to drive his car, so he took a taxicab, and when the taxicab was almost demolished in an accident, that was proof enough for Dieterle that the stars didn't lie. Why he wears white gloves while directing I don't know, but he wears 'em.

Scene designers and set designers have a taboo against using peacocks in designs—bad luck. . . . Claude Rains has an intaglio ring. He lost it for two years and every play he was in flopped. A maid found it in a drawer at home, and since then, everything he's touched has clicked.

If "Dodge City" lays an egg, Hollywood will blame it on the party which Errol Flynn [and the Warner publicity department] tossed on Friday the 13th, kidding all superstitions. While protesting that the party was to ridicule superstitions, the fact remained that the studio at which it was held yields to superstitions: There is no stage 13 on the Warner lot. . . . It is numbered 12-A instead. And Cy Wilder, studio controler, denied the courage of the party by insuring it for $100,000. "I'm not superstitious," he protests, "just cautious."

Critics Cordial to Van Vactor's New Symphony

New York opinion was divided yesterday on the merits of David Van Vactor's prize winning symphony in D, which the young Evanstonian had conducted in Carnegie hall the previous evening. The orchestra was that of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony society. The society had sponsored the American composers' contest in which Mr. Van Vactor, a member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and of Northwestern university's music faculty, had won the $1,000 prize.

Olin Downes, music critic of the New York Times, said in part: "This is not a negligible contribution. Whatever its weaknesses . . . it is more than a score which secured the award in default of the presence of something better. The symphony has architecture, a definite thematic . . . plan.

"In many respects this is a dismaying symphony—dismaying because of its unnecessary elaborateness of method and its apparently wilful refusal to consider procedure that would be harmonically natural. Of course this latter criticism can readily be disputed by the composer . . . Mr. Van Vactor led the performance with conviction and an author's authority, was cordially welcomed."

Comments of other New York reviewers included: "Directness, clarity and spirit were qualities of the performance . . . they were attributes also of the new symphony. There is nothing turgid, nothing static, in this symphony."

"It seems fair to surmise that for most listeners the work was not what might be called 'grateful.' Its clarity was that of the intellect, with its themes and upbuildings presenting little of emotional appeal. . . . It may be said that Mr. Van Vactor has written music of much skill and moderate substance. He gives promise beyond his considerable measure of achievement."

JOINT RECITAL

Emilie Hallock, soprano, and Norman Roland, baritone, shared a recital at the Goodman theater last evening. In German, Italian, and English songs and excerpts from German and Italian opera, Miss Hallock revealed a voice of wide range and fair quality, one which is at its best in a forte, but which loses sureness and substance in softer passages. Some of Miss Hallock's phrasing is of great nobility.

Mr. Roland sang a program as varied as that of his co-recitalist, bending his rich, powerful voice to the interpretation of music as far apart in time as Peri's "Orfeo" and Vaughan-Williams' "Silent Noon," and as different in character as a Mozart and a Giordano aria. His projection of the musical content of a song is, on the whole, easy and natural. However, he is often handicapped by too small an appreciation of the expressive value of subtly graduated effects of color and dynamics.

Nils Nelson provided very competent piano accompaniments.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mrs. F. Allison Moore of Evanston has announced the engagement of her daughter, Marjorie, to John C. Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Peterson of 2310 Farwell avenue. Mr. Peterson is a graduate of Northwestern university. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Knowles of Oak Park have announced the engagement of their daughter, Grayce Elizabeth, to John Joseph Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Francis of Chicago. Miss Knowles attended Rosary college and the University of Illinois. Mr. Francis attended the University of Notre Dame.

Dean Gilkey to Address Rally of Baptist Leaders

Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, recently appointed associate dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, will be among the speakers at the national meeting of leaders of the Northern Baptist church to be held Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 at the Stevens hotel. He will address the evening session on Jan. 31 on the world-wide responsibilities of the Northern Baptist church. Dr. Gilkey, who is dean of the University chapel, was appointed associate dean of the divinity school to act as its representative in its relations with the churches of the country.

Fabric Gloves Are Brightest Things in Town

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Blooming cheerfully in all the gayest of tulip colors, the newest fabric gloves are just about the brightest things in town. For the first time in fashion history all the delectable and unusual shades will be found in these supersoft fabrics.

Classics of the unadorned, slipon type come in all shades of yellow, delightfully fresh tones of green, mouth watering pink tints and the vivid shades of pink, violet, and enough different shades of blue to please the most pernickety customer.

Fabrics are so much like luxury doeskins and French suedes, even after close inspection, that they make expert alternates for the more expensive materials. Most of them are priced around a dollar and the assortment of colors leaves you gasping.

Smooth fit, a flawless cut and clever stitchery make them outstanding costume accents. Short wrist lengths as well as the longer gloves are plentiful. Some have fetching decorative trim in fanciful flowers or clusters of French knots worked on the back; some have contrasting thread seaming. All cling to the fingers and achieve a casually smart wrinkled formation over the cuffs of your dark dresses, coats or suits. Jubilant and appreciative shoppers are taking them out of circulation with enthusiastic speed, for they're the slickest fabric finds ever unpacked.

Handkerchief department. . . . Have you seen the sheer all black linen handkerchiefs flaunting huge oyster white flowing script initials in the corner? They're as romantic as a Viennese waltz, glamorous enough for a prima donna, and exquisitely smart tucked in a patent lether or dull crêpe bag. The five inch initials are alluringly old fashioned with lacy outlines and flowers combined to make the effective corner.

These handkerchiefs are new and unusual, and especially interesting as a dramatic accent for dinner clothes or all the smart new afternoon dresses of dull black crêpe.

Movie Account of Nazi Captive Is Strong Fare

"I WAS A CAPTIVE OF NAZI GERMANY."

Produced by Malvina
Featuring Isobel Lillian Steele
Presented at the Woods theater

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

This picture, though made in Hollywood, is, according to claim, founded on fact, and details truly the experiences of Isobel Steele, American journalist, arrested for treason by the Nazis.

Whether the narrative has been colored to sell I can't, of course, say, but, as it stands, it is a convincing screen document, splendidly acted and engrossing from first scene to last.

Because of her acquaintance and business dealings with people she is unaware are spies, Miss Steele, according to the story, was arrested while in Germany, imprisoned and denied the right to defend herself until, finally, her mother's appeals to their senator, Borah—who raised effective hell—resulted in her release.

Miss Steele, who plays herself, has an unusual personality and gives a vivid and intelligent performance. It's hard to believe that she has not worked before the camera previously. Other characters are strongly drawn, dialog is forceful, and direction was ot the best.

Truth or fiction, "I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany," is arresting screen fare.

See you tomorrow.

Cancel George Raft's Film Contract for Refusing Role

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—George Raft's $4,250 a week contract has been canceled, Paramount Pictures announced today, because Raft refused to play the lead in "Magnificent Fraud." Raft, who was with Paramount for eight years, was replaced by Lloyd Nolan.

Hope for Freezing Weather

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Miss Jean Morrissey is snugly dressed for snow or ice. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Morrissey of Highland Park, and skates at the Exmoor Country club. If weather permits the club will hold the races of its ice carnival today.

The arrival of snow was a cheering sign to a number of country clubs that have been planning ice skating carnivals for children and then postponing them. The Indian Hill club's children's costume ice carnival will be held this afternoon if the weather holds. If there is no ice the program will take place on the next favorable Saturday.

The costume parade will start promptly at 2:30 o'clock, to be followed by boys' and girls' races, entertainment and refreshments in the clubhouse. Arnold W. Totman and Everett R. Cook are in charge of the event. There will be prizes for costumes and for the winners of the racing events.

There hasn't been any skating at the Winter club in Lake Forest for two weeks, so no date has been set for the club's annual children's carnival, which is an outstanding one each winter. The Skokie Country club is planning a carnival for tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock, having postponed the event from last week.

The Exmoor Country club held the costume parade of its annual carnival last Sunday, but because the ice was not good the racing part of the program was postponed until this afternoon, weather permitting.

Nelson Eddys Return to Hollywood with Plans for Mansion

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Back from their marriage at Las Vegas, Nev., yesterday, Nelson Eddy, baritone, and his bride, the former Ann Denitz Franklin, entertained numerous photographers this afternoon and discussed plans for their "farm."

"We tried to find a real farm, but we couldn't locate one that suited us," the blond singer said. So they bought a lot in Beverly Hills on which they plan to erect a colonial mansion.

"We'll call it a farm, anyhow," Eddy said.

Party Attitude Means No to All Arguments

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

For today we offer just a few charm tips derived from recent holiday and general party observation.

At a house party one woman ended up with every one avoiding her and expressions of genuine dislike emanating from all sides. She was reported to us by her hostess to be a decorative person, colorful in a way, and a woman with a talent that should have won her a place of admiration if not endearment. But she had that trait of trying to impress about her wide knowledge by arguing. She protested almost every statement made, simply taking the opposite side to project herself.

One intrepid guest, hoping to squelch the argument, prefaced a statement of hers with: "Now, don't you dare contradict me on this." But she contradicted. The point is that no political, religious, or personal attacks were made which the woman might have felt called upon to defend. The conversation ran to the usual chattering of people off for a holiday week-end.

As the hostess reported: "It just goes to prove that an arguing woman is a pest of the first order. Of charm she has none!" Not a grain of charm did she register with that group. Nothing was gained by the arguing, only a reputation as a disagreeable house guest was earned.

One of the little songstresses, Joan Edwards, suggests that the way to be charming and popular is to "don the party attitude when you don the party gown." A good idea. The agreeable, if not actually festive, frame of mind is what puts one over successfully. In fairness to host and hostess one's grouches, grudges, worries, and personal troubles should be left behind.

Parties are the impressive occasions at which strangers are met and first impressions made. Take time to be gracious. Take an interest in others. Don't overwork trying to impress. Your qualities will not be overlooked if you are keen on ferreting out the beauties of the other person's nature.

Three Knitting Stitches Fashion a Chic Sweater

BY JEAN MACDONALD.

Knitted sweaters will be with us forever, because there is nothing nicer to wear with a soft wool skirt. Light, gayly colored yarns of the finest texture are one of the reasons for this unquestioned popularity. The combination of ribbing, stockinette and moss stitches serves to create one of the smartest models to date. They are simple stitches and require virtually no time to knit.

For instructions for knitting the sweater of ribbing, stockinette, and moss stitches, No. X-182, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Finds Suitor of Seven Years Too Stubborn

BY DORIS BLAKE.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

She tells: "I have been keeping company for the last seven years with a man. We plan to be married soon. But, somehow or other, I don't think the marriage will be a success. My husband-to-be is so stubborn. He must have his own way in everything. When we have disputes about anything I am always the one who has to make the apologies. He never says that he is sorry, even when every evidence points to his being wrong. He just must win.

"He tells me what to wear, even how to comb my hair. He criticizes my makeup. I can't do anything I want the way I want to do it. Outside of this trait, he is a perfectly grand person. He has no bad habits. I tried to break off several times, but soon we were back together again. He tells me that he loves me and I believe him. But when we are getting along nicely, I can't figure out why he starts a dispute. I have tried hard to change him, but he just won't be changed. POLLY."

Well, Polly, if you argue him into a change, you will simply have to make your attack from another front. Don't argue with him. You want him, don't you? You do not want any other man.

You can't make people over by hammering at them, criticizing them for their faults, but you can build up their ego so that they do the things you want them to do, meanwhile making themselves believe they are doing it of their own free will.

If you tried telling this chap what a grand disposition he has, instead of hammering on his stubbornness, you might see a change in him. And don't believe that you are not a guilty party, too, to the disputes. The fact that they continue proves it.

Jan Masaryk Charms Record Throng at Relations Council

Jan Masaryk charmed the 4,300 men and women who heard him at a luncheon meeting of the Council on Foreign Relations yesterday.

The crowd that assembled in the ballroom of the Stevens hotel was the largest in the history of the council. Luncheon was served to 1,800; the others were there as early as the lunchers, but they came only to listen. Almost as many were turned away as were able to enter the room and its balcony and adjoining foyer.

The son of the founder of the Czecho-Slovak republic made it plain he spoke only for himself. "I am not a bolshevist," he declared, "in spite of the attempt of German propaganda to make the world think my country was an outpost of soviet Russia. I am opposed to the régime in Russia. I think the terror there is unspeakable and Stalin's methods beyond contempt."

He declared his chief purpose was to make the youth of democracies value their liberty and freedom.

His talk, so serious that tears filled many eyes when he finished, was leavened with a delightful wit.

When asked about the influence of the Cliveden set, he replied that he thought it was greatly exaggerated. "Nancy Astor knows little about politics. She has a lovely house and a wonderful cook. And fifty footmen. So every one likes to go to Cliveden."

Hard to Fool This Wise Boy of Two Years!

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

That good old virtue, consistency, was to be today's article. So many signs of inconsistency have popped up before my eyes lately that I knew I must come back to it once again.

Well, I was about to expatiate on all this when I opened a letter saying:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: There are two stories I wish you'd reprint. One was called 'My Mother' written by the baby—it was a winner. The other was about the 'big brother' of 2 who got up at midnight."

I can't find "My Mother," but I did find the other.

"It was a cold winter night and the tiny new sister had awakened for her midnight feeding. The room in which Jane [the young mother] and her two children slept was large and had many windows. They were living with Jane's mother and in addition to the regular heat, Grandma Smith had placed there an oil heater to be used when Jane was obliged to be up with the new baby.

"Usually big brother slept right through the night. This particular night sister made more noise than usual.

"Suddenly, up popped brother's blond head, his big brown eyes opened wide, and he smiled his most winning smile. Anything unusual was such a pleasure to brother! He was so pleased to see his mother sitting there in the big arm chair in from of the bright heater.

"'I want to get up, too," he whispered. He had been taught to whisper when the baby was in her crib.

"'No, brother dear,' said his mother, 'It's too cold for you.'

"'I want to get up,' he insisted, 'You can wrap me up warm and I ca nsit in the big chair.'

"'No,' said Jane again, 'lie down and go to sleep again. As soon as baby has her supper I'm going to bed.'

"Brother began to look tearful.

"'O, well, what harm will it do to let him sit up a few minutes? He'll go right off to sleep again,' thought his mother and put him in the big chair wrapped in a blanket.

"Then came the big surprise! 'O, you funny little mother,' said this wise 2 year old, 'first you say no and then you say yes.'"

Salvation Army Seeking 3 Million for Pensions

The Salvation Army yesterday announced a campaign for a three million dollar endowment fund for retired officers. C. Y. Schaffer has been appointed director of the campaign for the central states. The officers, who may retire at half pay at 65 years, have been contributing to the fund for fifteen years.

GASOLINE ALLEY—TAKE IT WHILE IT LASTS

The Housewife

The average housewife tries out any number of can openers, hoping some day to find one that will not take the strength of an ox to use, that will not cut her fingers, and that will not leave the can with a whole series of dangerous jagged edges. We've experimented with a new gadget that you attach to the wall and we find it just about the most satisfactory thing we've ever seen for opening cans.

It operates simply and easily, it opens any shape of can, and more than that, it holds the can while doing the work. All you do is turn a little crank at the side. It cuts smoothly—no sharp, jagged edges—and it adjusts to any size of can.

EDITH WEIGLE.

"A Man to Remember" is a story that is merely humanity itself, but told with such understanding that it achieves greatness. It is simply the biography of a man known to everyone. This story which we recommend, proves conclusively that the screen can achieve dramatically effective human portraiture without resorting to the trappings of the conventional motion picture!

A Stranger in the Dark

By Frank R. Adams

(Copyright: 1939: By Frank R. Adams.)

SYNOPSIS.

The hero, pursued by Detective Mike Clancy, is stopped in a Chicago railway depot by a young man, apparently dying, who gives him his wallet and baggage check to get him his medicine. He gets the sick man's bags, then, seeing the man being carried away on a stretcher, he uses the man's ticket and is on his way to Clovis, N. M., as John Bowman—an innocent fugitive, having taken the blame for missing bank funds to save his father. Before reaching Clovis he confesses his identity to Sheriff Tom Johnson, who boards the train to welcome John Bowman, whose father, Pete Bowman, is dying and longs to see the son separated from him by divorce since babyhood. The sheriff persuades him to take on the rôle. John's sister, Mary, and her fiancé, Charles Ferdinand, manager of her father's ranch, meet him in Amarillo and fly him to the ranch in Charles' plane. Mrs. Lode, wife of Pete's physician and guest, is with them. Our hero falls instantly in love with Mary and dislikes Charles, a handsome show-off, who is the pet of Pete's sister, Matilda, who had loved Charles' father. The hero meets paralyzed old Pete Bowman, kept a virtual prisoner by Matilda, who has placed a dictograph in his room. Pete asks him to stay and help Mary, and gives him his guns.

INSTALMENT XII.

DANGER SIGNALS.

As I started toward the mantelpiece Matilda raised her voice. "Mary, if you're out there, come in and help this clumsy brother of yours so he won't make any unnecessary racket."

A question might have been raised as to how she knew where Mary was but I certainly did not care to ask it.

While Mary was helping me remove the weapons from their resting places Aunt Matilda concerned herself ostentatiously with giving Mr. Bowman some medicine out of a glass which stood on the table. She did not therefore notice when Mary softly opened a box which stood on the mantelpiece and took out two boxes of cartridges. But the invalid saw it and I thought there was a gleam of approval in his eyes as Mary handed them to me and I stuffed them in my pockets.

"Now, if you're satisfied," said Aunt Matilda sharply, "go away and give me a chance to get your father calmed down after all this excitement and before that no-account flibberty gibbet nurse comes on duty."

"Good night, sir," I said to the old man. "I shall endeavor to be worthy of your trust."

He looked at me for a moment and then turned his eyes away. He was tired and my heart went out to him.

When I was in my own room I looked at the guns. They were well oiled and in perfect condition. There were fifty cartridges for the revolver and an equal number for the rifle.

It seemed silly and melodramatic but I thought it was what Pete Bowman wanted so I was loading all three of the weapons when Mary knocked on my door and came in.

"When you finish put them in my closet," she said without preamble. "There's a good lock on it and I'll give you the key. You can get in any time. Some of the help might steal them," she explained.

I let it go at that.

What Mary had come in for in the first place—or what she said she had come in for—was to get me to hook up her dress.

After we had stowed the guns I went at the lady's maid job clumsily. Not that I am ordinarily so dumb at things like that but Mary was Mary which made it different.

"What," I asked lightly, "would you have done if I had not been here?"

"I'd have fastened it myself just as I always have. But don't begrudge me the luxury of having a brother, whom I find I adore, to lean on just for this once."

"I'd never begrudge you anything, Mary," I said huskily, "including the last drop of blood in my veins."

"I know, darling. I've never felt that way about anybody before, either—that they would do anything in the world for me, I mean. It's very comforting. It's wonderful finding at last some one you can trust. I'm afraid, John dear, that I love you very much."

She kissed me. I swear I didn't do it myself.

"You're sweet," I said.

"We seem sort of alone against an uncertain world," she mused. "Maybe that's why we were drawn together so closely and quickly. Father would be with us if he could, but he's a prisoner."

That's what I thought, too—that Pete Bowman was a prisoner—but I didn't say so.

Mary was continuing. "There was a sort of gesture of finality about it when he gave you his beloved guns. It was as if he said, 'My boy, take my place and God help you. I can't do anything more for you.'"

Mary was wrong. He did do one more thing but she never knew about that—for certain anyway.

She was still in my embrace when the door opened and Charles came in. He had over his arm an assortment of clothes which he threw on the bed.

"If you need anything, John, I think you'll find it there."

"Thanks," I said. "Do the guests dress for dinner here?"

"Not the men," he reassured me. "I wear this kind of an outfit myself because I'm practically the same as the head waiter around here."

The "outfit" in question consisted of black dress trousers, white mess jacket, soft silk shirt, black tie and a gay sash with a tasseled end hanging over his right hip.

In it he was magnificent. At any moment he looked as if he might burst forth into the Toreador song. With those wide shoulders, narrow hips and the face of a mousquetaire it was no wonder that he fancied himself and that few women could help following his example.

And, mind you, I think I would have been inclined to like him myself if it were not for Mary and that, I knew, was mostly sex-antagonism. I even understood and could have forgiven, in other circumstances, the streak of cruelty in his nature and the tendency to show off. There is nothing which is not understandable about those characteristics to any one who has served with an army under wartime conditions. Such men, in fact, usually make the best leaders.

He did not, I think, have the same intuitive and atavistic reactions toward me that I did toward him—not at that time, anyway. To him I was not a man contesting for the favors of his lady love. Instead, I was merely her brother and, as such, negligible. I annoyed him because I understood him, but that was all. He thought that I was merely something he would eventually have to comb out of his hair. For the moment he took a little amusement out of irritating me when he could.

As an instance of this he now handed me several statement-size sheets of paper clipped together which he had carried folded in his pocket.

"Miss Dangerfield instructed me to give this to you. It's her bill for the past week. She said you'd take care of it."

I looked at him and at the bill without comment. "Okay." I put the document in my pocket.

"Some kinds of fun cost more than others," Charles remarked. "I will say that Miss Dangerfield has had everything the ranch affords except a few of the bar fixtures."

"She is entitled to it."

"Of course, if you say so."

Any further discussion was cut short by the lusty ringing of a brass gong somewhere out in the patio.

"Dinner," Mary explained. "Come on, Charles, we'll wait for John out in the office. I'd like to take him in to his first meal in the old homestead, unless—" she paused inquiringly—"unless you prefer that Josephine——"

"I'll be with you in a minute," I interrupted Mary hastily. "Josephine has no claims on me."

"You mean for the moment," added Charles. "She has told me much, my gay brother-in-law to be, but I hope not all."

I could well believe that Josephine had told him enough so that when it filtered through to my ears I would realize that she meant business. I had a chance to think that over while I hastily cleaned up for dinner, which involved merely a change of linen, as I discarded the idea of wearing any of Charles' doubtlessly better tailored clothes.

In the mess hall, which was done "western" in the style of the other main room, was one tremendous round table, probably larger than that which King Arthur presided over, and a lot of smaller ones grouped around it. Owing to the shape of the center table there was no head nor foot to it, but I presumed that where Charles sat was the actual head no matter where it was. On his right was Mary, then I, and next to me, Aunt Matilda.

Very few persons pronounce "margarine" correctly. The tendency is to say it like the name "Marjorie," adding an "n" sound. But it should be said like the name "Margaret," dropping the "et" and adding an "in." The letter "g" is hard, and the "e" at the end of the word isn't sounded.

An old law, enacted in 1886, compels manufacturers to label their mar-gar-ins "oleomargarine." This is technically incorrect, since most of our margarines contain no oleo oil. Most of them are made from vegetable fats such as cottonseed oil, peanut, corn, soybean, and coconut oils. The pure oils are emulsified in ripened milk and salt to give body and flavor. Vitamin A has been added to a few of the best known margarines. Lack of vitamin A has been heretofore about the only real complaint against margarine as compared with butter. Butter, of course, is naturally rich in this vitamin.

I can remember margarines which had a fatty, unappealing flavor, but the new margarines have been so much improved that we hardly know them. They are more plastic than ever and they have a delicate and agreeable flavor.

Margarines aren't sold colored, for a tax of about ten cents per pound would make that highly undesirable from the standpoints of both manufacturer and consumer. Margarine is quite inexpensive as it is, and if we use it on the table we may color it, if we like, with the coloring which comes in each package.

Whether or not we use margarine on the table, we do love to use it in cooking. We use it to season vegetables, to rub the skin of the chicken we're about to roast, for white sauce, for cakes, cookies, and for quick and yeast breads and rolls.

Next time you heat the waffle iron, try these sour milk waffles made with margarine, and see if you don't find them crispy and delicious.

Sour Milk Waffles
[Six or Seven]

2 eggs
2 cups sour milk
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
6 tablespoons margarine, melted

Beat eggs until light and fluffy. Add milk and beat again. Sift flour before measuring, and resift several times with other dry ingredients. Add dry ingredients to milk mixture gradually, beating with a rotary beater until the mixture is smooth. Add margarine and blend well. Bake in a hot waffle iron.

It's fun to make candy with the tried and true recipes in Mary Meade's "Simple Homemade Candies." The booklet is on sale for 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower, or will be mailed to you for 5 cents in stamps.

Give Working Wives Better Chance for Marriage Success

Working wives have the edge on those who stay at home. They're more interesting to their husbands. They see more of their children than the "stay at homes." They don't have as much trouble with the servant problem, although as a rule they have less money. They manage budgets better.

A psychologist, three husbands and eight married women made these and other assertions favorable to married women who work. They spoke at an institute sponsored by the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education yesterday at the Morrison hotel.

Dr. Mary Shattuck Fisher, professor of child study at Vassar college, listed among "don'ts" for married couples:

Don't marry a man who had a wonderful mother.

Don't marry a wife with a famous and doting father.

Don't bring your daughter up to be able to earn her own living—and then teach your son to feel he's not quite a man unless he supports his own wife. This is bound to result in conflicts later on.

Don't turn an "executive" woman loose on a family.

Club Leaders Oppose Rigid Neutrality Laws; Attack Intolerance

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Leaders of two million clubwomen tonight opposed, by implication, rigid neutrality legislation. A resolution adopted by the board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs warned against legislation "which seeks to determine diplomatic strategy in advance."

The federation board, closing a three day meeting here, also urged member clubs to help create public opinion in their communities "that will prevent the growth of intolerance, injustice, or religious discrimination."

Milwaukee, Wis., was chosen for the 1940 council meeting of the federation, and Atlantic City, N. J., was awarded the 1941 golden jubilee convention.

Health Chief Warns Persons Over Forty to Live Their Age

Persons over 40 should live their age, Dr. Robert A. Black, acting president of the board of health, said yesterday. Rheumatic fever in children and the tendency of persons over 40 to live too fast are the two leading causes of the high mortality from heart disease, he said.

Dr. Black issued the warning as a member of the board of governors of the Chicago Heart association, which is conducting its annual Valentine stamp sale for the benefit of children who are victims of cardiac ailments.

A well-to-do Chicagoan whose wife had had three girl babies in succession and who had paid a prominent obstetrician large sums, larger each time, made a proposition to him when a fourth baby was expected.

"If it's a boy I'll pay you double the sum I paid when our last girl was born," he offered. "If it's a girl you deliver her for nothing."

The obstetrician agreed. Twin daughters were born.

A letter accompanying the clipping points out that several Chicagoans were at the party. Well, while we're about it, how about getting back some of our own cocktail napkins—white appliqued ones.

Program Note.

Two of the numbers of Rudolph Reuter's program, when he plays at the Goodman Monday evening for the benefit of Sinfonia, the musical fraternity, are compositions of Leopold Godowsky, who died last year, and there is some local significance to their selection. Godowsky lived in Chicago on South Park avenue in the late '90s and probably wrote at least one of the numbers while he lived there, to judge from the date of publishing.

Masaryk Listeners.

Seeing the crowds that pressed up the double stairway of the Stevens to the already packed ballroom to hear Jan Masaryk at the Council of Foreign Relations luncheon yesterday, one wondered what the council will do in the event Benes speaks. Engage the Stadium, probably—and pass sandwiches. . . . Masaryk's talk was almost a sermon. . . . "I'm talking a combination of idealism and politics," he concluded. "A large part of Europe has been flirting with the devil. You must help us get back to God. . . . You must not take your wonderful heritage of democracy for granted. You have got something priceless. Guard it. . . . Keep the souls of your children free. . . . Keep your literature and your music free. . . . We will win together." . . . There were 3,300 persons there, including the gallery listeners. And the Stevens served 1,500 pounds of whitefish to the luncheon guests.

Wood of 2258 Lincoln Park West, will take place at 8:30 o'clock tonight. The ceremony will be performed in the First Methodist Episcopal church in Evanston, with the Rev. Ernest Fremont Tittle officiating. A reception will follow in the parish house.

Mrs. James M. Kittleman will be matron of honor for her sister-in-law. Kathryn Ann Kittleman, a cousin of the bride, will be the junior bridesmaid. Miss Mae Bliss and Miss Martha Jane Forman will be the bridesmaids. Mr. Wood will have his father for best man, and the ushers will be the bridegroom's cousins, Hugh and Allan Wolff, James Kittleman, Robert Childs, Robert Woodcock, Robert Webster, Willard Jacques, and Gardner Stevens.

Mrs. Chauncey Borland In East to See Grandson.

Mrs. Chauncey Borland has gone east to welcome her first grandson, the baby born on Thursday in Framingham, Mass., to Mr. and Mrs. Barton F. Plimpton [Beatrice Borland]. The baby has two little sisters, Deborah and Audrey.

Mrs. Jacob Baur is giving a dinner at her home tonight for Ambassador and Mrs. Jefferson Caffery. The Ambassador and Mrs. Caffery are visiting Mrs. Caffery's mother, Mrs Daniel E. McCarthy.

Mrs. Beckwith Lee and a number of her friends will enjoy her Christmas present from her family tomorrow night. The present is a buffet supper at Mrs. Lee's home in Lake Forest. Mrs. Lee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Donald Black, who are giving the party.

Tavern Breakfast for Jacques Gordon.

Jacques Gordon, the violinist, a founder member of the Tavern club, is to be the especial guest at a breakfast at the Tavern tomorrow. Other members of the Jacques Gordon String quartet also will be there.

Mrs. Charles Arthur Weaver is giving a tea in her home at 5714 Sheridan road tomorrow for Nadia Boulanger, who will lecture at the Arts club on Wednesday morning. Mlle. Boulanger, who was the first woman to conduct the London Philharmonic and the Boston Symphony orchestra, also was the second woman ever to receive the Prix de Rome. Her late sister, Lili Boulanger, was the first to receive that award.

Winter and Racquet club members are planning to attend a doubles squash racquets match between James H. Douglas Jr. and Louis A. Volpe Jr., and James Pope and Michael J. Petrosky tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Volpe is the professional at the Winter club. Mr. Petrosky gives instruction at the Racquet club.

The George B. Everitts are giving a supper at home in Winnetka tomorrow night for President and Mrs. Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university. About one hundred have been invited. There will be a musical program by members of the Chicago City Opera company.

Mrs. Doering to Visit Daughters in Europe.

Mrs. Edmund J. Doering is sailing tomorrow in the Vulcania from Boston to spend two months abroad. She will visit her daughters, Mrs. Ambrogio Cassinerio [Edna Doering] in Florence, Italy, and Mrs. Harold Hartog [Nancy Doering] in Paris.

Mrs. Cassinerio and Mrs. Hartog are making plans to come to Chicago next June for a long visit.

Many of the members of the woman's board of St. Luke's hospital have travel plans, but most of them, like Mrs. A. Watson Armour and Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, are postponing winter holidays until after the 75th anniversary party of the board and hospital on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Armour will go to the Boca Raton club in Florida early next month. Florida is Mrs. Reed's destination, too.

Following the annual meeting of the board at 10:30 o'clock at the hospital, Mrs. John W. Gary, who has been president of the board for the last 12 years, will entertain at luncheon in the nurses' quarters. The date for next fall's St. Luke's fashion show will be fixed at the board meeting.

"West's double was optimistic, but let that go. This is a question of defensive play. West led the heart king. Declarer won and led a low trump. West permitted the jack to win and at this point a club finesse would have been attractive except for West's double and the equally significant fact that West had freely given declarer an entry to dummy with the spade jack. Hence, a heart was led and ruffed. Then the ace and a low trump were played. West won and returned the heart queen. Declarer let this win, throwing off a diamond. Another heart lead was ruffed by declarer and all the trumps were run off. Declarer now held the A-7 of diamonds and the A-Q of clubs. West had the K-J of diamonds and the K-6 of clubs. Declarer cashed the diamond ace [West playing the jack], then threw West on lead with the diamond king. The forced club return gave declarer his doubled contract.

"As a spectator I claimed that a master player in West's position would have jettisoned the diamond king on declarer's ace and in that way would have avoided being thrown on lead. I was severely criticized for this opinion on the theory that such a play would have been 'second-sighted.' What do you think?

"W. S. P., Beloit, Wis."

Well, all I can say is just this: If the play recommended by my correspondent was "second-sighted" or beyond the capabilities of a mere expert [let alone master], then I have been sadly overrating myself and hundreds of other players. By the time the diamond play came up it should have been perfectly obvious to West that he was facing a throw-in play. Declarer had discarded a diamond on the third round of hearts, hence it was almost inconceivable that, in addition to the seven spades and one heart he had shown, he could have held something like the ace-queen and two other diamonds [because in that case he would have discarded a worthless club]. The overwhelming presumption was that declarer had no better than the ace of diamonds, but consequently that he had excellent clubs. Hence, West should not have hesitated more than three seconds before getting rid of the diamond king on the realization that that was one card he would be better off without.

I feel absolutely sure that every expert worthy of the name would make this play which has been so euphemistically dubbed "second-sighted."

Chicago Joins College Plea of Presbyterians

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Chicago Presbyterians yesterday organized an area unit which will assist in the church's national sesquicentennial campaign to raise ten million dollars for Presbyterian colleges and Westminster foundations at state universities and colleges. Frank J. Loesch was named chairman of the Chicago committee. The meeting was held in the Union League club.

Although the financial drive is just getting under way, L. W. Robey of Philadelphia, Pa., general director of the national program, announced that $2,827,694 already had been received and that an unannounced donor has pledged $100,000 annually for four years to the campaign. Prof. Arthur H. Compton, University of Chicago physicist, national co-chairman of the campaign, outlined reasons for the support of religion in connection with higher education. John H. Finley of the New York Times is the other co-chairman.

Dr. Compton declared that either Christian principles of voluntary cooperation for the social good must be the basis of society, or else the principle of hate—which means eventual destruction—will rule, along with dictators and other tyrannical agents.

Mr. Robey announced that the fifty-three colleges of the church and the fifty-two university foundations will conduct their own campaigns aided by the Presbyterian board of Christian education and by five area committees. In addition to the Chicago unit, area organizations have been formed in New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, Pa., and St. Louis, Mo.

The Chicago committee includes Henry P. Chandler, Charles M. Moderwell, James H. Douglas Jr., Charles M. Thompson, Oscar C. Hagen, Frederick A. Watkins, Nathan G. Moore, Dr. John Timothy Stone, Milton A. Myers, and Dr. Robert H. Elliott.

Swedish-American Art Show to Be Opened Today

An exhibit by the Swedish-American Art association will be opened today in the galleries of the Club Woman's bureau at Mandel Brothers. The works of more than fifty artists will be shown. One of the works will be sent to the National museum, Vexio, Sweden. The exhibit will be opened by G. Oldenburg, Swedish consul general, and Mrs. Ruth Mannow Olsson, president of the American Daughters of Sweden.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

The tremendous popularity of the fresh clear scent of dewy clover isn't a bit surprising to us. We've adored it since it came to the beauty marts several months ago. It's the right answer to the prayers of women who like, for every day use, a feminine sort of fragrance that is completely out of the overpowering class.

Its appeal for the fastidious woman, who feels that strong perfumes are as out of place in the business office as an evening dress, is quite understandable.

Now there is a complete series of bath luxuries in this delectable scent. Talcum, bath powder, cologne AND a water softener. This last is really a find. It's a silky powder [not expensive] that you can use either in the tub or under the shower, to soften the water and to perfume the skin and make it sleek.

The showerers simply shake it on the body before stepping under the spray. It makes a quick shower something of a luxurious ritual and certainly a fragrant one. And it has a soothing, softening effect on the body complexion.

The bath luxuries in the pink clover scent happen to be our pets. They have a special appeal, we think, for working women who want freshness the dominant note in any fragrances they use. But the same house has these in other perfumes—equally good. You can take your choice of heliotrope, a lovely, cool lily and a beautiful honeysuckle.

There are perfumes in the same scents, of excellent quality. The price range is just what working girls would wish it to be.

RUPPERT LEAVES YANKEES TO THREE WOMEN

ILLINOIS MEETS WISCONSIN FIVE; SEEKS 1ST PLACE

Michigan Will Face Iowa Before 10,000.

Only one of the three co-leaders in the Big Ten basketball race—Illinois—figures in tonight's activity, curtailed by the midwinter examinations. Illinois, which went into a triple tie with Minnesota and Indiana by defeating Ohio State last Monday night while the Gophers, the title favorites, were upset by Northwestern, can take undisputed possession of first place by overcoming Wisconsin in Madison.

In the only other conference game the improving University of Iowa team will line up against last place Michigan in Iowa City. The Hawkeyes have won half of their league contests, while the Wolverines have lost three out of four.

Face Gophers Monday.

The Illini are facing their most crucial period of the race. After meeting Wisconsin they face Minnesota up at Minneapolis next Monday. If Illinois could bag both of those games it would be in a strategic position. The Champaign fellows, though, aren't dismissing tonight's foes. The Badgers, although beaten twice in four games, have a "fire wagon" offensive which, if it clicks, could wreck the budding Illinois title hopes. There probably will be no change in the starting lineup for the invaders, with Bill Hapac and John Drish at forwards, Pick Dehner at center, and Tom Nisbet and Jay Wardley at guards.

Expect 10,000 at Iowa.

Iowa anticipates its largest crowd of the season, 10,000. Neither the Hawkeyes nor their opponents are at top strength. Jim Rae, regular Michigan center, will be on the sidelines because of a strained back. Three Iowa players, Capt. Ben Stephens, Tommy Lind, and Charles Plett, are still bothered by slight injuries suffered in the last two conference games.

Three other middle western teams will open an eastern migration. De Paul will face the strong Villanova quintet in Philadelphia. Notre Dame is scheduled with Canisius in Buffalo, N. Y., and Ohio State will battle the Army in West Point, N. Y.

Loyola's undefeated squad will meet the alumni in their annual game in the Sheridan road gymnasium. Included in the alumni lineup will be Charles [Feed] Murphy, Loyola's first All-America star and captain of the

LOYOLA 37, AUGUSTANA 29

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Paced by Wibs Kautz, its sharpshooter, Loyola university rallied to whip the Augustana five, 37 to 29, before 3,000, a capacity crowd, tonight. The victory was Loyola's eleventh straight. Kautz made 18 points and Willard Anderson of Augustana 15.

In the final minutes George Lenc, six foot three inch Norse forward, tipped in a rebound after W. Anderson had missed a free throw to tie the score at 27 all. Mike Novak put Loyola in front again with a set shot and Kautz added a free throw. Novak blocked Lenc's shot, then Kautz sank a short shot. W. Anderson dropped in a side shot to finish Augustana's scoring.

Loyola was a heavy favorite, but the Norse stayed close throughout, mostly because of W. Anderson's shooting. Half way through the final period Loyola led, 24 to 20. Lineups:

Outdoor Show Opens Today in Amphitheater

BY BOB BECKER.

The first annual International Outdoor Sportsmen's show will open at 11 o'clock this morning in the International amphitheater. The show will continue through Sunday, Jan. 29.

Many sports of interest to outdoorsmen and hundreds of exhibits and special events are on the program. The main exhibitors are northern fishing and hunting resorts, travel bureaus, fishing tackle manufacturers, conservation agencies, boat manufacturers, trailer manufacturers, and similar groups.

Exhibitions Twice a Day.

Twice each day, afternoon and evening, there will be floor shows consisting of ski jumping by Anders Haugan, professional ski jumping champion; log rolling contests, pistol and rifle shooting, canoe tilting, indoor skeet shooting, and an exhibition of retrieving by trained Labradors handled by Francis Hogan of Barrington, Ill.

Bait and fly casting contests are sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, with twenty handsome trophies being awarded to the high scorers of events to be held during the show. There will be no competitive event today, but the pool will be open for practice and demonstrations by famous casters.

From 7 o'clock until 7:45 this evening the casting pool will be reserved for casters who plan to compete in any event to be held during the week. From 7:45 until 8:15 the pool will be reserved for casters who plan to compete in the obstacle event, which is new on the casting program this year.

No Fee for Casters.

There is no entry fee for any of the casting events. Casters who plan to practice this evening should enter the amphitheater by the contestants' gate facing Halsted street. W. J. Butler of the Shedd aquarium will be in charge of the casting pool and all events to be held there during the show.

Baseball's Gambling Table

A Story of Expensive Failures and Surprise Bargains in Big League Player Deals

[This is the second of a series covering major league transactions in which, for better or worse, big money was spent either with a minor circuit or to move an athlete from one major team to another. The third article will appear Monday.]

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

THE name Martin O'Toole doesn't mean much, if anything, to the current crop of baseball patrons. Even the fans in the 'Way Back When class might have to furrow their brows before recalling such an athlete in big league baseball.

If Marty is remembered at all it should be not for what he accomplished but as a man who couldn't make good after being ballyhooed in the prints as the wonder boy—the boy who was a dead certainty to leave permanent marks in baseball history.

Martin O'Toole.

All that Marty left behind him after a brief act upon the big league stage was a disillusioned club owner who, whenever he happened across a canceled check for $22,500, involuntarily launched into a discourse on the uncertainties of baseball. The owner who spent to his sorrow was the late Barney Dreyfuss, who, when head of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was looked upon as the man always a couple of jumps ahead of his associate National league magnates.

Sold for $22,500 After Failing in Two Big League Trials.

It was in the summer of 1911 that this sorrel topped lad named O'Toole began to attract attention. He was piling up victories with the St. Paul club, and the big league scouts started to drift in from the four points of the compass. In time several of the major clubs got down to business.

Suddenly the deal broke, and when announcement was made that the Pittsburgh club had paid $22,500 for O'Toole, a spitball pitcher, with his battery mate, Billy Kelly, thrown in for good measure, the experts scoffed. Nobody ever had paid that much for a couple of minor leaguers. No baseball magnate, even when trying to kid the public, ever had the courage to come forth with such a dazzling figure. But the $22,500 really was paid and not much time elapsed before Dreyfuss became convinced he had erred—he had written too many ciphers into the check.

After O'Toole had failed—Kelly also passed out quickly—there were any number of folks willing to take credit for calling the turn in advance. And most of them weren't exaggerating on their prophetic powers.

O'Toole had previously fallen by the wayside on jobs with two big league teams. When he first went to St. Paul he wasn't even considered good enough to be retained. He was farmed out to Sioux City in 1910 but soon found himself and was recalled. And he was a manipulator of the spitball—the now banished item which proved the undoing of the greater percentage of youngsters who tried to master its mysteries. Dreyfuss overlooked all these features, preferring to believe O'Toole's 1911 splurge at St. Paul was an unfailing sign of his readiness for the big show.

Released to St. Paul by Boston in Spring of 1910.

O'Toole, a product of South Framingham, Mass., played semi-pro ball around his home town and branched out professionally with Brockton in 1907. He still was there the following fall, but had accomplished enough in a pitching way to be drafted by the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds granted him a tryout in the spring of 1909 but saw nothing to indicate they had a $22,500 toy in their control. So they gave him a ticket back to Brockton. He was drafted again at the end of the 1910 season, this time by the Boston Red Sox. The following March he was turned over to the St. Paul club in a deal which involved a half dozen great unknowns.

Manager Kelley at St. Paul wasn't impressed and promptly shipped him to Sioux City, where the youngster suddenly found himself, a development which caused him to be recalled by the Saints. He continued to click in American association company, leading to his sale to the Pirates for $22,500 in 1911 and becoming, at 21 years of age, baseball's most expensive trinket.

In his first major season O'Toole wasn't exactly hopeless. There were times when he showed flashes of brilliance, but he never had the consistency expected of a player carrying a record breaking price tag. He won 15 games and lost 17. It was said without ever being proved that the St. Paul club, before delivering him, overworked him as a gate attraction and thus ruined his arm. In 1913 he melted down to six victories and eight defeats, and Pittsburgh conceded it had taken a beating on its $22,500 expenditure. O'Toole was released to the Giants in 1914 and compiled a poor record of two wins and nine beatings. It wasn't long before he had gone his way.

C.D.G.A. DECIDES AGAINST HOLDING '39 CHICAGO OPEN

Votes to Clear Way for U. S. Amateur Meet.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Officials and directors of the Chicago District Golf association yesterday unanimously approved a resolution to forego the 1939 Chicago open tournament. The tournament has been conducted by the C. D. G. A. for the last two years. It was indicated that the open, which had taken a major place on the regular tournament schedule in its brief history, will be resumed in the future.

Reason for yesterday's action was that the postponement of the event will allow the C. D. G. A. to lend its full support to the national amateur and western open tournaments, both of which will be held in the Chicago district this season.

The national amateur tournament already has been awarded to the North Shore club for the week of Sept. 11.

Three May Be Too Many.

The C. D. G. A. feels that three major events would congest the local competitive calendar and that since national and western tourneys come to our town on an average of only once in a half dozen years, the district organization should back them to the limit.

The resolution adopted yesterday follows:

Resolved: That the Chicago District Golf association forego the 1939 Chicago Open Golf tournament in order it may lend its full support to the officers and directors of the Western Golf association, who are desirous of holding the western open championship at one of the Chicago District golf clubs this summer.

Also be it further resolved: That the Chicago District Golf association give its full coöperative support to the United States Golf association and assist to the limit of its ability in conducting the United States national amateur championship at the North Shore Golf club in September.

Sarazen Wins First.

The first Chicago open was held at Medinah in 1937 and was won by Gene Sarazen with a 72 hole score of 290. Last year Sam Snead took first prize with a 54 hole card of 207 at Olympia Fields.

Present at yesterday's meeting were A. W. Hale of Medinah, president of the C. D. G. A.; Maynard G. Fessenden of Bob o' Link, vice president; E. A. Dolan of Park Ridge, treasurer; E. A. Eulass of Calumet, secretary; Walter G. Leininger, ex-officio president, and the following directors: Howard Brundage of Butterfield, R. Donald Cameron of Evanston, John A. Carroll of Midlothian, Thomas McMahon of Skokie, William Otter of Westmoreland, F. M. Quinn of Riverside, E. D. Rutherford of Medinah, Horace P. Ramey of Olympia Fields, and Robert F. Zeddies of Exmoor.

MAJOR LEAGUES' ALL-STAR GAME SET FOR JULY 11

[SCHEDULE ON NEXT PAGE.]

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The 1939 major leagues' all-star game, which will be played here in the Yankee stadium as part of the world's fair festivities, will take place July 11, it was announced today as the official American league schedule was released for publication.

Silver Skates Races Postponed Till There's Ice

The Tribune Silver Skates derbies will not be held this week. Although postponed indefinitly because of ice conditions, they will be held at the first opportunity. Officials said yesterday that freezing temperatures for 24 hours would be sufficient to prepare a course in La Follette park. It may be possible to hold the races at night and plans have been made accordingly.

Announcement will be made in these columns on the day the races can be held.

In the Wake of the News

BY ARCH WARD.

HOWIE WEISS, Wisconsin's great full back, who was awarded THE TRIBUNE trophy for being the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team, is said to have had some difficulty explaining to a certain Badger co-ed those kisses the movie heart throbs planted on his cheeks when Wisconsin met U. C. L. A. on the west coast last November. . . . However, there has been a complete understanding and she will be looking on when Howie is presented with the trophy between halves of the Wisconsin-Purdue game at Madison Feb. 18. . . . Illinois' basketball team may travel to the Pacific coast for several games next season during the holidays. . . . Entries in the Cleveland Plain Dealer's Golden Gloves tournament have reached 652. . . . Its sponsors predict a record. . . . EX-CHORUS GIRL GETS THIRD AND $300,000 CASH

Remainder Divided by Two Nieces.

New York, Dec. 20.—[Special.]—A former chorus girl, once cast for a bit part in "Sitting Pretty," today became an heiress and one-third owner of the New York Yankees when the will of Col. Jacob Ruppert was admitted to probate.

Yesterday a mild sort of baseball fan, today part owner of the greatest team in the game, the Cinderella girl, Helen Winthrope Weyant, was too bewildered to comment freely on the stroke of fortune that made her the principal beneficiary in an estate variously estimated to be between $30,000,000 and $70,000,000.

Helen W. Weyant.

In addition to an equal share with Col. Ruppert's two nieces, Mrs. Joseph Holleran and Mrs. J. Basil Maguire, Miss Weyant, who is 37 years old, chestnut haired and slender, received $300,000 outright. This was the only cash bequest to the principal beneficiaries provided for in the will.

Hospital Given $150,000.

The only additional legatees are the Lenox Hill hospital, which will receive $150,000, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which was given a year to select what it wanted out of Ruppert's art treasures, a large part of which composes one of the leading collections of jade in the United States.

Except for these bequests, the estate in its entirety, including the Yankees and all Ruppert's brewery and real estate holdings, is to be shared equally by Miss Weyant, Mrs. Holleran, and Mrs. Maguire.

Miss Weyant, a native of Winthrop, Mass., lives with her mother in West 55th street. The will, made on March 7, 1934, says that she is "sometimes known as Winthrope Wayne." That is the name she used on the stage, when she appeared in the choruses of "The Merry Malones," with George Cohan and "Three Cheers" with Will Rogers. She is the sister of Rex Weyant, assistant traveling secretary of the Yankees team.

So shocked at first by news of the windfall that she would talk to no one, Miss Weyant finally yielded to requests for interviews.

Meets Ruppert When 13.

"It's all bewildering," she said hesitantly. "I am surprised—and a little frightened. The first time I knew about it was when the will was read on Tuesday in Col. Ruppert's apartment. I got a telegram asking me to attend. I knew nothing about it, not even when I saw him the night before he died.

"I was very, very fond of Col. Ruppert," continued Miss Weyant, rather embarrassed by the spotlight turned on her. She had known Col. Ruppert since she was 13 years old, she said.

"Was it a sort of father and daughter relationship?" she was asked.

"I never asked him," then, after a moments hesitation, she added, "but I rather felt that way."

Miss Weyant is one of four children. Her father, George W. Weyant, died five years ago. In business in New York at one time, he knew Ruppert and through him others in the family met the colonel. In recent years, Miss Weyant said, she had seen Col. Ruppert with increasing frequency, serving as hostess at his estate and visiting him almost daily during his illness.

Heirs May Inherit in Turn.

The nieces are mentioned in the will by their maiden names as Helen Ruppert Silleck and Ruth Rita Silleck. Both live in Greenwich, Conn. Mrs. Halloran is the mother of two children and Mrs. Maguire of one.

There are no other heirs, except that there is provision that the heirs of the three beneficiaries may inherit in turn. The will explained other relatives had been left out because some had been provided for by Col. Ruppert's father and others are in position to provide for themselves.

Only the conventional statement that the estate is "in excess of $10,000" was made at the time of filing. However, it is known to be in the millions, estimated as high as $70,000,000.

If the taxable net estate should total $70,000,000, federal and state taxes will take all except approximately $12,000,000. A treasury official has said the government can collect $32,000,000 of the first $50,000,000 net and 79 per cent of all over that amount, a total of $46,000,000. The New York state inheritance tax laws provide for a tax of 20 per cent of the amount by which the net estate exceeds $10,000,000.

LAKE SHORE A. C. SWEEPS A. A. U. SWIM HONORS

Lois Wenzel Sets New 220 Yard Record.

One women's meet record fell and another was tied as the Lake Shore Athletic club captured both the men's and women's titles in the Central A. A. U. junior swimming meet in the Lake Shore club last night.

Lois Wenzel of the Shawnee Country club swam the 220 yard free style event in 2:54.5, breaking the record set last year by Muriel Berndt by 2.9 seconds. Margaret Johnston of Lake Shore swam the 50 yard free style event in :29.8, tying the mark set in 1932 by Claudia Eckert of Shawnee.

Lake Shore scored twenty points in the women's events, gaining its margin of nine points over the Shawnee club by a slam in the 50 yard event. Medinah's points were scored by Patsy Heekin, who won the 100 yard event.

Lake Shore scored fourteen points in the men's events to eight for the Skyline A. C., and five for Shawnee. Edwin Wuerst of Shawnee won the 50 yard free style event, William Carlsen of Lake Shore the 100 yard swim, and Robert Christians of Skyline the 220 yard event. Summaries:

RECOVER BODY OF PAUL SHANNON, BOSTON WRITER

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The body of Paul Shannon of Boston, president of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, was recovered this morning from nearby Pass-A-Grille bay. Shannon, 64 years old, had covered sports for the Boston Post for the last thirty-five years.

Shannon apparently fell into the bay from a seawall where he had gone for a walk about 10 o'clock last night. He was seen sitting on it nearly an hour later, but when he failed to return home at midnight, his wife notified police.

Shannon's position as president of the Baseball Writers' association will be taken by Charles [Chilly] Doyle of Pittsburgh.

MORTON HEAVIES BEAT NEW TRIER TO STAY IN LEAD

Oak Park Quintet Defeats Waukegan, 40-31.

The Morton High school heavyweight basketball team defeated New Trier, 29 to 26, last night in Winnetka to retain its lead in the Suburban league. It was the fifth victory in six starts for the Cicero squad.

Oak Park remained in the running for the title by beating Waukegan, 40 to 31. A total of 35 fouls was called and each team used ten men. It was the fourth triumph in five games for Oak Park.

The Hirsch juniors scored their third victory in the south section of the city league yesterday, defeating Fenger, 30 to 24, to remain the only undefeated team in the division.

In the north section the Lane seniors won their fourth straight game to go into a tie with Lake View for the lead. Lane routed Sullivan, 44 to 28, Nelson, forward, contributing sixteen points.

The unbeaten St. Ignatius seniors registered their fourth victory in the north section of the Catholic league, beating Fenwick, 34 to 20. Mount Carmel's juniors, who were leading the south section, fell before Leo, 31 to 26. Weber and St. George kept pace for the north division lead by winning their third victories, Weber over Loyola, 26 to 16, and St. George over St. Philip, 25 to 16.

GOLDEN GLOVES PHYSICAL TESTS START MONDAY

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Although Golden Gloves entries for the Chicago qualifying tournaments will be accepted until Feb. 4, more than half of the amateur boxers who will compete this year will report for physical examinations next Monday and Tuesday nights. Later examinations will be held in Trafton's gymnasium, 180 West Randolph street, on Jan. 31 and Feb. 10.

The C. Y. O. boxers who report at the C. Y O center, 31 East Congress street, Monday night and the boys who report at Trafton's Tuesday, may select any one of the four Chicago tournaments. Each boxer who passes the examination of the staf of physicians headed by Dr. William Rothman will receive a ticket of admission to the tournament for his handler and instructions for reporting for his first match.

Registration Explained.

Open division boxers register with the Central association of the A. A. U. for one year. This fee of $1 is paid by the boxer and most of these boys already are registered with the association.

The Novice boxers will register with the A. A. U. on the evening they report for physical examinations. This registration fee will be paid by The Tribune Charities, Inc., and the card is valid only for the Golden Gloves bouts.

Boys who receive letters to report Jan. 31 in Trafton's gymnasium will be assigned to the south side, north west, or north side tournaments. On Feb. 10, the final examination, the boys will be assigned to either the northwest side or north side tournaments. The schedule of dates on which each of Chicago's four tournaments start follows:

West—Madison Athletic club, 4711 Madison street, Feb. 1.

South—White City, South Park avenue and 63d street, Feb. 7.

Northwest—Mariold Gardens, Broadway and Grace streets, Feb. 16.

North—Loyola university gymnasium, Loyola avenue and Sheridan road, Feb. 20.

Gold Medals to Qualifiers.

Each of these tournaments will qualify eight sectional champions, one in each weight class, for the Tournament of Champions in the Stadium Feb. 27, 28, and March 1. These are Open division boxers. Eight novices also will be qualified in each sectional meet for the semi-finals of Chicago's Novice tournament. These bouts will be held in conjunction with the Tournament of Champions on Tuesday evening, Feb. 28. The novice championships will be held March 1.

All of these boxers, Novice and Open divisions, will receive gold qualifying medals. The Chicago Novice champions crowned March 1 will be awarded a gold glove. The eight champions of Chicagoland, determined in the finals on March 10, will receive golden gloves set with a diamond. Each runnerup receives a silver glove set with an emerald. All other boxers who are placed on the Chicago intercity squad are awarded bronze gloves, each set with a ruby. The intercity team will meet the New York Golden Gloves squad in the Stadium March 29.

ARMOUR QUINTET TO FACE CHICAGO TEACHERS AGAIN

Armour Tech will meet the Chicago Teachers' college and the Denver Nuggets, National A. A. U. champions, will face the La Salle Hotel Cavaliers in a basketball doubleheader tonight in the Coliseum.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The Michigan and Ohio State swimming teams swam to a 42 to 42 tie tonight.

Joyce, Jenkins Fight to Draw in White City

Fight Decisions

At New York—Pedro Montanes stopped Ambrose Logan [5]; Mello Bettina beat Henry Cooper [8]; Al Wardlow beat Joe Baynes [6].

At Hollywood, Cal.—Mike Belloise beat Georgie Hansford [10].

Willie Joyce, 1937 Chicago Golden Gloves featherweight champion, and Lew Jenkins, Sweetwater, Tex., junior lightweight, fought ten rounds to a draw in White City last night.

Referee Tommy Gilmore called the fight a draw, but Judge William Battye voted for Joyce, 51-49, and Judge James McInerney scored Jenkins, 53-47. Battye awarded Joyce the third, seventh, ninth, and tenth rounds and gave Jenkins the fourth, fifth, and eighth.

Many in the near capacity crowd of 1,950 thought Joyce deserved the decision. It was one of his most skillful performances. Gross receipts were $1,818.

Joyce weighed 128 pounds and Lew, 130¼.

Frankie Kainrath, former Golden Gloves batamweight champion, resumed his winning ways by beating Joe Law in the five round semiwindup. Other winners were Swede Lind, Alborn, Minn., 150 pounder; Billy McFarland, St. Paul, 145 pounder, and George Nelson, south side, 145 pounder. Lind beat Bobby Lamonte in four rounds, McFarland stopped Bob Perkins in two and Nelson knocked out Johnny Williams in three rounds.

Jack Whittinghill of Bloomington, Ill., beat Lou Angelucci, army welterweight representative to the last Olympic trials, in the five round windup of the amateur boxing show last night in the Madison Athletic club. Two other Bloomington fighters were beaten, Ruben Tubbs by Vince Pellegrini, local lightweight, and Elmer Holt by Fred St. Germaine, Cherokee middleweight from the 124th Field Artillery armory. Other results:

Sam Consolo beat Y. Z. Colquitt [5]; Joe Karzmarski beat James Aikens [3]; Tom Mair beat Eddie Colquitt [3].

The sixteen finalists—survivors of a record field of 148—returned to training chores yesterday for the eight Illinois Athletic club amateur boxing championships to be decided in the I. A. C. gymnasium Wednesday. Pairings:

112 pounds—Al Noto, C. Y. O., vs. Anthony Bausone, C. Y. O.
118 pounds—Frank Bausone, C. Y. O., vs. Willie Moon, C. Y. O.
126 pounds—Homer Williams, Savoy, vs. Robert Jarrell, C. Y. O.
135 pounds—Harry Sparrow, C. Y. O., vs. Al Jackson, C. Y. O.
147 pounds—Jack Carter, Savoy, vs. Isaiah Wells, C. Y. O.
160 pounds—Edward Girard, Savoy, vs. Hiner Thomas, C. Y. O.
175 pounds—Altus Allen, Savoy, vs. Hubert Hood, C. Y. O.
Heavyweights—Lee Christians, Lincoln Turners, vs. William Snell, Y. M. C. A.

Budge Deals Vines 5th Straight Loss; Leads, 9-4

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Don Budge won for the fifth successive time in his tennis duel with Ellsworth Vines tonight, scoring an 8-6, 1-6, 6-4 triumph over the world's professional champion. The victory gave Budge a margin of nine victories to four in his tour with vines.

The exhibition will continue through tomorrow. It is sponsored by the Elgin Racing Pigeon club.

Squash Rivals Play Today for League Lead

Positions on the Chicago squad in the national squash racquets tournament to be held here Feb. 11, 12, and 13, will be at stake today when the second round of play in the Chicago District Squash association's city league championship opens.

Feature match of the city league play will bring together the John Marshall Squash club and the Dartmouth Alumni club in a battle that may decide the 1939 class A title. John Marshall is the defending champion and won its first round match from the Dartmouth squad. The other class A match involves the Chicago Town and Tennis club and the Chicago Athletic association.

The class B program matches the Lake Shore Athletic club and the University club, the John Marshall Squash club and the Evanston Y. M. C. A., and the Chicago Dearborn club and the Dartmouth Alumni club.

The players to be sent to the western tournament in Minneapolis next week will be chosen after today's matches.

KILDEER COUNTRY CLUB RE-ELECTS 1938 OFFICIALS

Members of the Kildeer Country club reëlected Charles R. Shuesler as president and retained the entire 1938 slate of officers at their first meeting of the new year last night. Financial figures showed a healthy growth for the club, which reported a net income of $5,602.92 for 1938. The previous year's figures showed a net loss of $6,282.15.

Other officers reëlected were:

Walter A. Koren, vice president; W. W. Watts, secretary; Raymond F. Moore, treasurer; Kenneth Cram, Herman Fabry, Harrison E. Gidden, John H. Goessele, Oliver E. Mount, Royden R. Pretty, Fred Schroeder Jr., and the four officers, directors.

Ft. Sheridan and Detroit Falcon Poloists to Meet

Fort Sheridan will meet the Detroit Falcons and the Chicago Shamrocks will face the Rangers in a Metropolitan Polo league double-header tonight in the 124th Field Artillery armory.

Third place in the high goal division will be at stake in the Detroit-Fort Sheridan battle. Each team has beaten Evanston and each has lost to the Ramblers. Comparative scores make Detroit a slight favorite.

Second place will be the reward to the winner of the Shamrock-Ranger match.

HAWKS RETURN FROM 'EXILE' BREATHING FIRE

Just 'Let 'Em at Those Americans Tomorrow!

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Blackhawks returned last evening from their winter training camp in Muskegon, Mich., and there was not a man on the squad who didn't feel certain that the week's training there didn't assure retention of the Stanley cup, or something like that.

Manager Paul Thompson, a fine young man who doesn't talk just to hear his head roar, said he was well pleased with the exercise outing and that he believes the lads will get back on the main track in tomorrow night's engagement in Chicago Stadium against the New York Americans.

The Muskegon trip was designed in part to weed out a few boys who have had lead in their shorts. When these fellows showed up in Muskegon, however, it developed they had left the lead in Chicago quarters. So there is no immediate shuffling or dismissal of personnel in prospect.

Americans After Seibert.

When Red Dutton, manager of the Americans, reaches town it is expected he will renew clatter for a trade which would send Earl Seibert to the Americans for a player and cash. It is the Hawk thought, however, that the Hawks have as much or more fresh money than the Americans and that a new song will have to be sung if Seibert is to go away. Now if Dutton had something to say about getting rid of Sweeney Schriner—

The Hawk-American game will be the fifth of the season between the teams. Each has won two.

In tomorrow's game, Dutton will present his argument against the theory that hocky forwards are washed up shortly after their thirtieth birthdays. Smith is well over 30 and in his fifteenth season. Stewart has been a pro for fourteen years.

Stewart a Record Holder.

Stewart, always a center ice player, is the holder of more scoring and point making records than any other player the game has known. He is the first and only National league player to make 300 goals and 500 assists.

Two of the Americans have been pressing the Hawks' Johnny Gottselig's position of the National league's leading scorer. Both Schriner and Tommy Anderson have a chance to pass Gottselig's twenty-four point total in Toronto tonight.

GANG BUSTERS

Use Cameras NOW

The Camera is catching more criminals than bullets these days, smart sleuths tell us. Even a certain noted gentleman detective of the comic strips is employing millimeters instead of calibers in his present exciting case.

If that crime-hunter wants real efficiency in all his sleuthing, he would be wise to OWN a good camera instead of renting one. And, of course, it take no deep detecting to know the best place for photographic supplies.

ALFRED COWLES' WILL DISPOSES OF $985,000 ESTATE

Former Tribune Director Leaves Bulk to Sons.

The will of Alfred Cowles, a director of the Chicago Tribune company for forty-eight years and a leader in Chicago civic affairs, was filed yesterday in the Probate court. The bulk of the estate, estimated at $985,000, was left to two sons, Alfred Cowles III. and Knight Cheney Cowles. The will refers to a provision that had previously been made for another son, John Cheney Cowles, of Meriden, N. H.

Mr. Cowles left a number of bequests to his office and domestic employés, including $50,000 to Miss Genevieve Teuton, his secretary. The domestic employés are to receive $100 for every year they were with the Cowles family. Emil Zornig, valet and houseman with the family for twenty-five years, who lives in the family residence at 1130 Lake Shore drive, received a bequest of $2,500.

Father Associate of Medill.

Mr. Cowles died Jan. 15 in his home after an extended illness. He was 74 years old. His father, Alfred Cowles Sr., was an associate of Joseph Medill, founder of THE TRIBUNE, and his son succeeded him as a director of the company.

Under the terms of the will bequests of $10,000 each were left to Mrs. Elizabeth Strong Cowles, wife of Alfred Cowls III., and Mrs. Alice Farnsworth Cowles, 750 Sheridan road, Lake Forest, wife of Knight Cheney Cowles. After these bequests and those to the employés the remainder of the estate is set up in various trust funds. The shares of stock in the Chicago Tribune company are to be divided equally between the two sons, Alfred III. and Knight Cheney.

Deceased Son's Children Share.

The remainder of the trust funds is set up for the benefit of these two sons and the children of another son, Thomas Hooker Cowles, who died several years ago. They are Mary Hoyt Cowles, 16 years old, and Sarah Frances Cowles, 14, both of Neenah, Wis.

Mr. Cowles, in 1928, with his brother and sister, gave to Yale university a fund of $350,000 for the study of government. He also contributed to the support of research work conducted at Colorado Springs, Colo., over the last six years by the Cowles Commission for Research in Economics.

OBITUARIES

Elzie E. Stringfellow.

Funeral services for Elzie E. Stringfellow, old time theatrical official, will be held at 10 a. m. Monday in the chapel at 5708 Madison street. Mr. Stringfellow died Thursday night in St. Anne's hospital after a brief illness. He was 63 years old and lived at 5648 Madison street. Mr. Stringfellow was an official of the old Bijou and Columbia theaters and was active in theatrical groups in Chicago. He had been an employé of the Commonwealth Edison company for the last fifteen years. His widow, Catherine, a daughter, LaVonne, and a son, Angus, survive.

Mrs. Florence Kendall.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Mrs. Florence Helen Messmore Kendall, the "Lady Florence" who when nearly 70 years old drove a war ambulance in France and maintained a war hospital, died today at the home of her son, Messmore Kendall, in Palm Beach. She was 88 years old. She was born at Rockford, Ill., and was a descendant of a Huguenot who came to America in 1712 and of Anne Hutchinson of colonial fame.

Patrolman Oscar Ellison.

Funeral services for Patrolman Oscar Ellison, a member of the police force for ten years, will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in the chapel at 2056 Belmont avenue. Patrolman Ellison, who was 48 years old, died Thursday in his home at 3016 Clybourn avenue. He was attached to the Town Hall station. His widow, Onedea; three brothers, and two sisters survive.

Dean Hinman.

Funeral services for Dean Hinman, former construction engineer for the Chicago Great Western railroad, will be held in his home at 1363 East 50th street at 2:30 p. m. today. Mr. Hinman, a native Chicagoan, died Wednesday at the age of 62. His widow, Frances Rix Hinman, survives.

The Rev. Alfred W. Anthony.

Waltham, Mass., Jan. 20.—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. Alfred Williams Anthony, 79 years old, of West Lebanon, Me., former professor of theology at Cobb Divinity school, Bates college, died today.

Charles E. Ashley.

Charles E. Ashley, Aurora alderman and a former director and vice president of the National Soft Ball association, died yesterday in Copley hospital in Aurora. He was 56 years old and lived there at 768 Kane street. Mr. Ashley organized one of the first soft ball teams for girls, the Ashley Red Hots, and was for years a national figure in the sport. Surviving are his widow, Meta, and two daughters. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in the chapel at 336 Downer place. Burial will be in Spring Lake cemetery.

Thomas P. Meehan.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Thomas P. Meehan, 47 years old, vice president and eastern manager of the Porter-Langtry company of Chicago, publishers of trade journals, died of pneumonia here yesterday in his home. Mr. Meehan had been associated with the publishing firm for ten years and previously was vice president of the American Air-Dry corporation in Chicago. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Irene C. Mackay Meehan, three sons, and four daughters.

Mrs. Frances L. Wright.

Mrs. Frances L. Wright, 95 years old, one of the oldest residents of Aurora, died yesterday in her home there at 56 South Fourth street. She was born in Granville, N. Y., and had lived in Aurora for seventy-three years. She had been a member of the Park Place Baptist church since 1866. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday.

Robert P. Getty.

New York, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—Robert Parkhill Getty, 78 years old, former New York lawyer and descendant of an old colonial family in Yonkers, died yesterday. During the world war he was legal advisor to the commandant of Great Lakes naval station and lived in Chicago for some time after the war.

W. W. WOODS DIES; MEAT PACKERS INSTITUTE HEAD

William Whitfield Woods, for ten years president of the Institute of American Meat Packers, died yesterday in his offices at 59 East Van Buren street. Mr. Woods was 48 years old. He collapsed, supposedly from a heart attack, at his desk.

W. W. Woods. [Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

A former college instructor and newspaper man, Mr. Woods joined the institute in 1918 as director of public relations. In 1922 he became a vice president in charge of education and research. He was executive vice president in 1925 and three years later was made head of the institute.

Mr. Woods was born in Meridian, Miss., and attended a military school in Mobile, Ala. For two years, 1911 to 1913, he taught English in Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college.

He became a reporter for the New York World in 1915, remaining with the paper for three years.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Dorothy Dunkin Woods, and a son, Richard W. Woods. He resided at 5456 Blackstone avenue. His son is in New York City.

MRS. KONYVESY, AT 101, IS A LADY OF MODERATION

Mrs. Fredericka Konyvesy, who lives at 128th street and Avenue O, celebrated her 101st birthday yesterday. More than 100 relatives and friends attended, and the neighborhood ladies' aid society served luncheon. There was a cake. Mrs. Konyvesy's daughter, Mrs. Annie Neubieser, 82, was present. Both she and her mother have been blind for a number of years. Mrs. Konyvesy came to this country from Saxony in 1852. Her recipe for longevity is: "Ert just enough, rest just enough, and work just enough." Among those at the party were Mrs. Konyvesy's eight grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, and five great-great-grandchildren.

EX-CONVICT SEIZED FOR PARTICIPATING IN LIQUOR STORE HOLDUP

William J. O'Connor, an ex-convict who has been sought since last Dec. 16 for participation in a liquor store robbery at 5040 Madison street, was seized by police last night at Jackson boulevard and Kilpatrick avenue. A companion of O'Connor, Raymond Ewing, was killed during the holdup by Detective Frank L. Murphy. O'Connor escaped. He was seen yesterday in a parked car by Policemen Patrick Touhy and Albert Glass, who arrested him. Police said he admitted being Ewing's companion and that he confessed twenty-two other robberies. O'Connor lives near where he was seized.

GERMANY HEADS FOR INFLATION, ECONOMIST SAYS

Regard Dismissal of Schacht as Signal.

The Nazis' removal of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as head of the German reichsbank yesterday was immediately interpreted as the tipoff that Germany was definitly headed for outright inflation.

Dr. Melchior Palyi expects inflation of mark.

Schacht for years has been the anchor holding the Nazi party to orthodox financing methods, although even under Schacht's financial leadership there has been a gradual growth of hidden inflation of bank credit to finance the tremendous military expenditures necessitated by rearmament.

In New York and London yesterday the German "registered" mark fell sharply in foreign exchange transactions. Quotations at one time approached the low levels of last September during the Czecho-Slovakian crisis.

Mark Slumps in New York.

The registered mark fell to 16 cents in New York yesterday, against the closing price of 16.70 on Thursday.

German bonds dropped as much as three points in London, unsettling quotations on other securities.

Dr. Melchior Palyi, guest professor of finance at the University of Chicago and former Berlin bank economist, said that in his opinion the removal of Schacht meant that Germany would immediately undertake to finance government expenditures through inflation, using the Reichsbank as a vehicle.

Dr. Palyi offered the following figures to show the extent to which inflation of the "hidden" type has already progressed in Germany:

1. The volume of currency in circulation in 1938 increased 20 per cent, excluding the increase resulting from the acquisition of Austria and the Sudetenland.

Bank Clearings Increase.

2. The volume of bank clearings increased 50 per cent during the year.

3. Bank and savings bank deposits rose 15 per cent.

4. German government debt increased eight billion reichsmarks, according to official figures.

"Dr. Schacht," Palyi said, "has insisted that Germany cannot spend for both rearmament and industrial prosperity without resorting to inflation, and he has refused to travel the road of outright inflation again. To date he has been able to force the Nazis to travel the orthodox route. His removal means that the Nazis will take the course of inflation."

Official Value Not Accepted.

The "official" value of the German reichsmark in foreign exchange is about 40 cents, but German money is not accepted at that figure by business men and traders in other countries. That is the reason for the low quotations on the registered mark—quotations which more accurately reflect the actual value of German currency.

Even the "registered" mark, however, is subject to certain restrictions and conditions which tend to make the quotations on it artificial. Actually there is not a great deal of trading in German money. Even yesterday the volume of transactions was not large.

Other foreign currencies changed little in terms of American money yesterday. The British pound dipped 1-16 cent and the French franc and Swiss franc were unchanged. The belga and guilder declined slightly.

In London bar gold was quoted at 148 shillings 7 pence, up 1½ pence. This was equivalent to $34.78 at the current rate of exchange.

EXPECTED TO PUSH BARTER.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—American trade experts said today they believed Adolf Hitler had decided to continue Germany's artificial system of barter trade regardless of any possible effects on world economy. They drew this conclusion from Hitler's replacing of Hjalmar Schacht as president of the reichsbank by Walther Funk.

Funk, American experts said, has sworn to push Germany's barter system for all it is worth. Schacht, on the other hand, has been quoted as saying barter was a "medeival method."

Trade men gave little notice to Funk's threat to switch German trade from the United States to the Balkans because, they said, Germany for a long time had been buying here only goods she absolutely needed and which would be hard to get elsewhere at a fair price.

London Fears Trade War.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's abrupt removal of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as president of the reichsbank alarmed British business today by breaking the strongest link between English economic ideals and the Nazis' bold self sufficiency policy. Many persons here saw in the development the threat of a new and widespread trade war.

There was a general feeling there would be an intensification of heavy German subsidies which would permit sharp underselling by German firms all over the world.

Study Building Plane Bodies from Plastics

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—A special army board is studying the possibility of making warplane wings and fuselages from plastics by a process which a New York industrialist said today promises to solve "admirably" the problem of mass production.

The new process was described to the monopoly committee by George A. Baekland, vice president of Bakelite corporation, who said it would make possible construction of a fuselage or wing in two hours by the labor of nine men—about one-twentieth to one-thirtieth of the present manufacturing time.

The witness added that it would mean a greatly reduced expenditure for tools and equipment, make possible rapid changes in design.

Predicts Speedier Planes.

Baekland also said the new process would give an increase in speed up to 35 miles per hour because of the absence of rivets, screw heads, and bolts on the plane's surface.

Baekland, who said his company supplied only the material for the work, testified that these results had been obtained in closely guarded experimental manufacturing and that commercial production was near.

[Officials said experiments with plastics in aircraft construction were being carried on by several concerns, Baekland's among them.]

Baekland said a factory for large scale production has been designed, and "production awaits a contract which is now pending." Questioned by reporters, he declined to say whether the contract was to be with the government.

Developed by Army Officer.

Baekland told the committee that new type construction was developed by a retired army colonel named Clark, whom he described as "one of the ablest and foremost technicians in aircraft design."

"I received permission to mention this thing today, or I shouldn't have done so," he added.

The bureau of standards, Baekland told the committee, had found the strength-weight ratio of the new aviation plastic to be better than that of any material now in use.

In the United States, Germany, and England plastics already are being used in connection with wood and other materials to fabricate propellers able to withstand heavy stress, yet lighter than metal.

Some officers said privately they believed the use of plastics offered the most immediate promise in the manufacture of small training planes.

AAA SIX MONTH EXPENDITURES ARE 247 MILLION

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Expenditures of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, including payments to growers participating in crop control programs, totaled $247,761,653 from July 1 through Dec. 31.

The AAA report said the disbursements included $114,151,196 in price adjustment payments to cotton growers and $23,996,798 in benefit payments to cane and beet sugar producers. Administrative outlays, exclusive of county AAA committees, aggregated $10,163,580. Of this $6,889,428 was for salaries.

Among the expenditures by states were: Illinois, $4,078,538; Indiana, $3,448,450; Iowa, $13,923,444; Michigan, $2,876,053; Ohio, $2,670,698; Wisconsin, $4,769,635.

The department of commerce estimated total 1938 farm cash income, including government benefit payments, at $7,632,000,000, against a revised estimate of $8,574,000,000 in 1937.

Report Loan by Britain to Support Chinese Money

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 20.—According to the Daily Herald, arrangements are nearly completed for a British government loan of 3 million pounds sterling to China to support Chinese currency and stabilize exchange. Provision for such a loan, it is pointed out, is "a logical sequel in the present circumstances to the assistance given by Sir Frederick Leith Ross in the stabilization of Chinese currency shortly before the Japanese invasion."

Business Books

"Death by Tariff," by Raymond Leslie Buell. [University of Chicago Press. Price, 25 cents.]

Dr. Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy association, concludes that if our public life is to be continually dominated by pressure groups, each struggling for its bounty, the form of government is not likely to have much effect on the final result—which will be disaster.

What is needed, according to the author, is enlightened self interest on the part of industry, labor, and agriculture. Each must realize that its welfare depends ultimately upon the welfare of the country as a whole. Each must be willing to accept an immediate sacrifice for the sake of an ultimate good so that America can be made safe both for democracy and private enterprise.

"Primer of Labor Relations," prepared under direction of John W. Taylor. [Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., Washington, D. C. Price, $1.]

What is a goon? An outside man? The stretch out system? These labor terms are defined along with many others in this volume, which is a digest of labor relations. Each of the thirteen chapters deals with a separate phase of the general subject. Complicated rulings, orders and decisions are reduced to simple paragraphs explaining one particular point and suggesting an approved method of operation.

Butter Prices Sink to 5 and 6 Year Lows

Butter futures prices fell to five and six year low marks in early trading on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Reports that the government may reduce its pegged price level or abandon its attempt to bolster prices were responsible for the demoralization of the market.

November storage butter slumped ¾ cent a pound in the first hour to 22¼ cents, the lowest quotation since November of 1933. A slight recovery later lifted the future to 22⅞ cents, off ⅝ cent from Thursday.

Sets Six Year Low Mark.

May fresh butter finished at a six year low of 21¾ cents, a discount of $624 a carlot under the level at which the Federal Surplus Comodities corporation is maintaining 90 score butter. January storage contracts sold down to 24½ cents a pound. This was ¼ cent below the preceding close and 5 cents under the price the Dairy Products Marketing association is asking for its holding of storage standards. February storage butter ended ¼ cent lower at 24 cents.

To maintain prices in the cash wholesale market the FSCC was required to buy 350,000 pounds of butter. It was reported that 500,000 pounds of reserve butter held in Chicago is being inspected for sale to the DPMA. This government subsidized association is authorized to buy about 1,400,000 more pounds, traders said.

Egg Prices Decline.

Egg futures prices dropped because of weakness in the cash market. January refrigerator eggs sank ½ cent to 14¼ cents a dozen, and October refrigerators fell ⅜ cent at 19 cents. January fresh eggs broke a full cent to 16½ cents. February fresh eggs closed at 16⅝, off ⅜ cent.

Wholesale egg prices declined ½ to 1¼ cents a dozen to their lowest levels since early last March.

UPTURN IN AUTO OUTPUT LARGER THAN EXPECTED

A larger than expected increase in automobile production was shown this week with a total of 90,205 units, against 86,925 in the preceding week and 65,418 in the like 1938 week, Ward's Automotive Reports, Inc., reported yesterday.

Ward's said this week's expansion came at a time that is ordinarily a dull period. It was within 12½ per cent of the 1938 high mark, which was reached in December. There has been no change in the generally favorable conditions, Ward's asserted. January retail sales were said to be holding up better than seasonally.

Inventories of used cars on Dec. 31, 1938, totaled about 650,000 units, against 800,000 at the end of the preceding year, according to a survey made by the National Automobile Dealers' association. This represented a reduction of 18 per cent. The estimate was based on reports from 725 dealers representing all makes of cars and located in all geographic sections of the country.

STORES' SALES RUN 3 PER CENT BELOW YEAR AGO

The federal reserve board reported yesterday that department stores in the nation did 3 per cent less business in the week ended Jan. 14 than in the corresponding week a year ago. In the four weeks ended Jan. 14, however, retail sales rose 2 per cent above the total for the same period last year.

Sales in the seventh federal reserve district [Chicago area] declined less than the national average. The drop from the volume in the corresponding week in 1938 was only 0.4 per cent, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago said. In the two weeks ended Jan. 14 the decline was 6.4 per cent, but in four weeks the sales rose 4 per cent.

In Chicago department store sales in the week ended Jan. 14 fell 3.5 per cent. In the two week period they declined 8.9 per cent. In four weeks they gained 3.3 per cent.

SELLING OF JAPANESE WAR BONDS IN HAWAII IS ENJOINED BY SEC

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—The securities commission announced tonight it had halted the sale in Hawaii of a Japanese bond issue to provide funds for hostilities in China.

The commission said it had obtained an injunction from the United States District court for Hawaii, restraining the Doshikai—otherwise known as the Patriotic Bond subscription society—from soliciting subscriptions for a 1 million yen issue of Japanese emergency bonds. The bonds are known in financial circles as "the Chinese incident issue."

About $56,000 collected from subscribers will be returned, the commission said. The injunction was consented to by the society and by its principal officers, who were named among the defendants, the SEC announced.

The commission charged that the Japanese government was offering publicly an issue of emergency bonds and that the Doshi Kai, its officers and agents, were soliciting subscriptions to the bonds through the mails in Hawaii without previous registration under the securities act of 1933.

FREIGHT TRAFIC RECOVERS FROM HOLIDAY SLUMP

Freight trafic in the week ended Jan. 14 totaled to 586,877 cars, a gain of 56,028 cars, or 10.6 per cent from the total for the preceding week, the weekly report of the Association of American Railroads indicated yesterday. This represented also an increase of 6,137 cars, or 1.1 per cent, from loadings in the corresponding week a year ago, but was a decrease of 109,158 cars, or 15.7 per cent from those of two years ago.

The relatively lower total of freight loading in the week ended Jan. 7 is partly attributed to the holiday on Jan. 2, which shrank industrial activity that week. The gain last week over the corresponding week in 1938 marked the recovery from the decline in the week ended Jan. 7.

The association's classified report of commodity loadings follows:

Commodity—	Wk. ended Jan. 14.	—Change from— Prev. wk.	Year ago.

SEEK TO REMOVE BRANDT AS REO MOTOR TRUSTEE

Cleveland, O., Jan. 20.—(AP)—The Securities and Exchange commission today filed a petition in federal court for a rule to show cause why A. J. Brandt, trustee of the Reo Motor company, of Detroit, should not be removed because of being an "interested" party.

The commission's petition alleges that the Reo directors on Nov. 1 appointed Brandt as acting executive superintendent and that on the date of his appointment as trustee he was still acting in that capacity, and was also a creditor of the corporation.

Judge Arthur V. Lederle set a hearing on the petition for Monday.

Utility Rejects Memphis' Bid for Properties

New York, Jan. 20.—[Special.]—The Memphis Power and Light company, an operating unit in the big Electric Bond and Share company system, today informed the city of Memphis, Tenn., that the price of $18,127,000 offered by the municipality for the company's electric and gas properties is entirely out of line with the real value. The offer is not a "fair price," it decided.

The company's decision to reject Memphis' proposition, submitted on a "take-it-or-leave-it" basis, with a definite answer demanded by 1 p. m. today, was reached after an all night conference of officials of the National Power and Light company, the parent company. The latter's effort to obtain a week's extension of time from the officials of Memphis had proved to be futile.

Negotiated Several Months.

Paul B. Sawyer, president of National Power, has been in constant negotiation with Memphis officials for several months trying to work out a satisfactory deal. Recently he set $21,000,000 as a "fair price" for the company's properties.

In turning down the offer, the utility declared that it would be impossible to reduce gas rates. This alternative was suggested by Memphis in the event the company wished to sell only its electric properties. A price of $13,500,000 had been set by the city for acquisition of electric facilities, but this offer was conditional on the company agreeing to reduce substantially its present gas rates.

Expected to Speed New Plant.

As a result of this turn of events in the controversy construction of a competing municipal plant, receiving power from the Tennessee Valley authority, is expected to be speeded immediately. This was indicated in rejection of the request for an extension of time.

"Your request now for a further extension is unreasonable and unjustified," the Memphis commissioners' telegram to officials of Memphis Power and National Power said. "Under no circumstances can we permit further negotiations to delay the completion of our municipal system."

ALLIED MILLS' 12 MONTH NET EARNINGS FALL

Net income of Allied Mills, Inc., and subsidiaries fell to $986,808 in the 12 months ended Dec. 31, the company reported yesterday. This was equivalent to $1.04 a share on the outstanding stock. Net profit was $1,338,155, or $1.41 a share, in the preceding 12 months.

Allied Mills, with general offices in Chicago, is a large producer of liquors, animal feeds, soy bean products, and flour.

Rustless Iron and Steel company reported that its 1938 operations had resulted in a net profit of only $81,110. It had net income of $713,138 in the preceding year. In the fourth quarter of 1938 net earnings were $158,463, against $82,212, in the corresponding quarter of 1937.

A preliminary report of the Belding Heminway company, maker of silk products, showed estimated net profit for 1938 was $320,000, equal to 72 cents a common share. Actual 1937 net profit was $490,770, or $1.05 a share.

Net incomes of companies which reported yesterday follow:

	Quarter Ended Dec. 31. 1938.	1937.

Four New Appointments Are Confirmed by Senate

Washington, D. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—The senate today confirmed the following appointments: Forrest F. Hill of New York, governor of the Farm Credit administration, succeeding William I. Myers, resigned; Franklin W. Hancock Jr. of North Carolina, a member of the federal home loan bank board, succeeding William F. Stevenson; Edward C. Eicher of Iowa, a member of the Securities and Exchange commission, succeeding John W. Hanes; Henry Ohl of Wisconsin, a member of the federal board for vocational education.

TRANSIT MERGER PLAN APPROVED BY COURT'S AID

Shaw Calls It Fair to Security Owners.

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.

Unification of Chicago's traction facilities moved ahead another step yesterday when a merger plan for combining the surface lines and elevated railways was approved by Walter A. Shaw, traction adviser to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Shaw filed a report holding that the proposed capitalization of a new unified company was sound and equitable to securities holders of the two systems. The merger plan had previously been agreed to by representatives of securities groups of the elevated and street car companies. It is a modification of a proposal made by Shaw last September.

Hold Hearings After Feb. 1.

Shaw's report was received by Judge Michael L. Igoe in the absence of Judge Wilkerson, who is out of the city. Hearing on the report will be held when Judge Wilkerson returns after Feb. 1.

Capitalization of the new company, exclusive of securities sold for cash to help finance a modernization program, would total $178,005,709 of bonds and preferred stock plus 2,685,519 shares of no par value common stock.

In his report Shaw estimated there would be a gain of at least 15 per cent in the volume of riding when the transit systems are merged and modernized. Earnings resulting from such volume, he said, should be sufficient to support the proposed capitalization.

Smooth Out Details.

He said that details in connection with the merger plan are being worked out. He urged that negotiations with the city for a unified traction ordinance be completed as rapidly as possible.

"It is a just, reasonable, and practical capitalization, subject only to securing from the city and other municipalities concerned, satisfactory arrangements involving franchises and other provisions," Shaw's report read.

"The agreements reached to date relate wholly to features of the unification and financial structure of the corporation. The relations of the new corporation with the city are undetermined. The character of these relations is of vital importance to the entire undertaking. If the essentials of the plan are changed they might materially influence the ability of the new corporation to conduct its operations successfully."

Proposed Capitalization.

The new company would issue the following securities in acquiring the elevated and street car systems:

First mortgage A bonds	$72,718,350
Mortgage income B bonds	7,002,291
Preferred stock	98,285,068
Common stock [shares]	2,685,519

The new securities would be distributed to the two systems as follows:

	Surface Lines.	Elevated.
A bonds	$72,718,350	....
B bonds	....	$7,002,291
Preferred stock	62,821,466	35,463,602
Common stk [shrs]	1,579,717	1,105,802

Shaw's previous modernization program provides that the new company would also issue about $45,000,000 of new equipment certificates to pay for new rolling stock. It is planned, also, that the new company would later issue additional securities to acquire the Chicago Motor Coach company so that all transit facilities would be operated as one system.

Trustee Given Continuance.

A. A. Sprague, trustee for the elevated company, was given a continuance to Jan. 25 to file a reorganization plan for that system. The plan will arrange for distribution of the elevated company's share of the new securities to present holders of bonds and stocks. The surface lines already have a reorganization plan.

New Financing Declines Sharply from Week Ago

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—New financing in the week ended Jan. 19 fell to $8,556,766, or about 40 per cent of the preceding week, Poor's Publishing company reported today. Details follow:

Woman Loses Suit to Regain Grain Losses

Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg yesterday ruled against a Chicago woman who sought to recover from her brokers $25,000 which she lost speculating in wheat futures. Suit was brought against the brokerage firm on the grounds that the losses were gambling losses which are recoverable under Illinois statutes.

Earlier court decisions had held that purchases of grain futures on margin were gambling transactions when it was established that the purchaser had no intention of taking actual delivery of the grain.

Basis of Earlier Decisions.

The basis of the earlier court decisions is the Illinois penal statute which provides that persons may bring suit for recovery of a gambling loss within six months after the loss is incurred. The statute also provides that after six months, if no suit has been brought, a third person who is not party to the transaction may bring suit for recovery. Treble damages are provided, one-half going to the party bringing the action and the balance to the state.

The case decided by Judge Feinberg was brought against E. A. Pierce & Co. by Mrs. Myrtle Salzman, 102 Parkside avenue. Mrs. Salzman asserted that she lost $25,000 in July, 1937, in transactions in wheat futures through the Pierce firm. A customer's man employed by the Pierce firm handled Mrs. Salzman's business.

Holds Partners Not Liable.

Attorney for Pierce & Co. made the defense that because the recovery suit was brough under a penal statute the firm's partners could not be held liable for the actions of their agent, the customer's man handling the Salzman account. Attorney Harold M. Keele of the firm of Levinson, Becker, Peebles & Swirin, represented Pierce & Co. No testimony was given, Keele said, to show that the firm's partners were familiar with the nature of the operations carried on by Mrs. Salzman.

Judge Feinberg upheld the argument of the defense attorney, pointing out that the remedy provided for persons seeking to recover gambling losses is clearly based on a penal statute.

"The statute in question," he said, "is a penal statute; penal in the sense that it declares the public policy of this state, and prescribes a penalty for its violation. In addition to the penalty there is a civil remedy provided for."

Threat to Any Firm.

If brokers were held liable under the statute for the actions of their employés no brokerage firm, he said, would be "safe from assault by the unscrupulous conduct of a salesman."

"The best of houses," he added, "would collapse under such conditions."

Attorneys expressed the belief that Judge Feinberg's decision, if upheld by the Supreme court, will greatly lessen the potential liability of brokerage firms operating on the Chicago Board of Trade and other futures market. Nearly all the futures transactions on the Board of Trade are made on margin.

MARSHALL FIELD SUED FOR $333,736 BY MRS. M'KINSEY

Marshall Field & Co. was named defendant in a $333,736 suit filed in Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Alice McKinsey. She is the widow of James O. McKinsey, chairman of the board of Marshall Field & Co. from 1935 until his death Nov. 30, 1937.

Mrs. McKinsey contends that the $333,736 is due McKinsey's estate under the terms of a contract he made with the company in October of 1935. By this contract, the suit sets forth, McKinsey was empowered to purchase 50,000 shares of Marshall Field stock at $10 a share, or, after buying 20,000 shares, he could elect to take in cash the difference between the fixed price of $10 and the market price, which was approximately $25, on the remaining 30,000 shares. She said the contract was carried out and the money credited to McKinsey's account.

In her complaint Mrs. McKinsey charges that Marshall Field & Co. has failed to pay the money credited to McKinsey's account to his estate.

CUSTOMS FEES SHOW SLUMP IN MIDDLE WEST

Customs collections in the Chicago controler district slumped to $14,824,595 in 1938, Thomas Temple Hoyne, controler of customs, reported yesterday. This was less than half the 1937 collections, which totaled $30,670,626, a new high mark for the district.

"The decline was caused by a combination of factors," Hoyne said. "Grain imports into the district from Canada were much smaller during 1938. Also, less liquor was imported, more of the domestic product being used. Finally, the unsettled situation in Europe and the far east resulted in lower imports from those countries."

In 1936 collections amounted to $27,864,386 and in 1935 $19,981,971, Hoyne said. The Chicago controler district includes Montana, Idaho, both Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, and parts of Michigan and Indiana.

CHICAGO FIRMS WILL SHARE IN RAIL FINANCING

Business Promised by Trustees.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Support for the efforts of Chicago financial institutions to get a share of the business originated by Chicago railroads now in reorganization is being promised by the trustees of a number of these roads. These trustees were appointed by federal judges to operate the roads under court supervision during reorganization.

Chicago banks and trust companies complain that New York financial institutions have been named as trustees, registrars, or paying agents for practically every security issue of a Chicago railroad. The Chicago houses believe they are entitled to share these appointments in the cases of railroads which either have their headquarters here or which have Chicago as one of their principal terminals.

Seek Part in Reorganization.

There is not much that can be done now about getting the trusteeships of securities issued by the roads that are still solvent. But the Chicago houses argue that they should be given consideration when it comes to naming trustees, registrars, and paying agents for securities that will be issued by the Chicago railroads on the completion of their reorganization.

Two of these roads, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois and the Chicago Great Western, are expected to emerge from reorganization in the near future. Former Judge Charles M. Thomson, trustee of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, is outspoken in his support for the claims of the Chicago houses. Luther Walter, trustee of the Great Western, is known to be sympathetic.

Other Trustees Sympathetic.

Of the other four Chicago roads having their headquarters here, Walter J. Cummings, co-trustee of the Milwaukee; Joseph B. Fleming, co-trustee of the Rock Island, and Holman D. Pettibone, trustee of the Monon, also are known to be sympathetic. Charles P. Megan, trustee of the Chicago & North Western, is noncommittal.

"I certainly favor the appointment of Chicago banks and trust companies as trustees for new security issues to be put out by the reorganized Chicago railroads," Thomson said. "We have in Chicago a dozen banks and trust companies well qualified to handle this type of business. There is no reason why they should not be given an opportunity to get it.

"I haven't the slightest complaint about the treatment we have received from the New York houses. They have been all right.

Wants Chicago As Center.

"But in the case of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois we have a middle western institution. Our operating headquarters are here, the responsible officers are here. I believe that it would be in the best interest of all concerned to have all the financial details handled here.

"I certainly see no reason why we should be compelled to go to New York every time we must have a consultation regarding our security issues. That is a waste of time and money that could be avoided if the trusteeship of the various securities were locaetd in Chicago.

"There is no reason why a railroad having its headquarters in New Orleans, for example, should come to Chicago to get a trustee for its securities. And there is certainly no reason why a Chicago railroad should go to New York.

Urges Shift in Control.

"Putting complete financial control in New York is like having a financial NRA, in which complete financial control is vested in New York bankers.

"Chicago banks have loaned Chicago railroads in reorganization money for the purchase of equipment through the issuance of equipment trust certificates. They should get other business as well."

The appointment of trustees, registrars, and paying agents for roads coming out of reorganization will be made by reorganization committees.

MASSACHUSETTS BONDING AND INSURANCE COMPANY

The Board of Directors have declared a quarterly dividend of 87½ cents a share on the capital stock of the Company, payable February 6, 1939, to stockholders of record at the close of business January 27, 1939.

Stocks, Bonds

New York Stocks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 20.—Stocks closed irregularly lower today after blowing hot and cold throughout the session. The range was narrow. Firmness in the public utility and farm equipment shares was the only feature. Support for these issues had a steadying influence on other sections of the list, so that the day's worst prices were improved upon near the close.

With trading sometimes at a standstill, transactions totaled 739,690 shares. A total of 746 issues appeared for action, of which 274 advanced, 303 declined, and 169 closed unchanged.

Power and light shares provided a good deal of activity. Volume honors went to North American company, which closed a minor fraction lower. Other active utility stocks on the downside included Consolidated Edison and American Water Works. The leader on the upside was Commonwealth and Southern.

United corporation, Columbia Gas and Electric, United Gas Improvement and Standard Gas and Electric were among those to hold their own or edge higher.

Key steel stocks were mostly lower. United States Steel lost nearly one point. Both Bethlehem and Youngstown incurred declines exceeding one point.

In the motors, Chrysler came back into the plus column for a fraction, but General Motors slipped one-quarter point.

Aviation issues were dragged lower on scattered selling. American Smelting was the big loser in the coppers, dropping 1¼ points. Oils were mostly lower.

Rails failed to benefit from the increase in carloadings. Changes were mostly fractional on the downside.

Electric equipments, notably General Electric and Westinghouse, were fractionally higher.

New York Bonds.

New York, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Prices of United States government issues advanced in today's bond market. Gains ranged up to 6-32d point. Industrial and utility loans also showed general advances, mostly fractional. Rails were mixed.

In the foreign list, bonds of Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Italy, and Prague showed strength. Prague 7½s of 1952 gained 2 points, closing at 60; Argentine 4s of 1972 rose ⅝ to 77½.

Following the Nazi ousting of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as head of the Reichsbank, German 5½s of 1965 slipped 1⅜ to 19⅜. The 7s of 1949 receded 1 point to 25.

Chicago Stocks.

Chicago stocks advanced yesterday. The Tribune average of twenty stocks closed at 11.61, up 0.11. A total of 31,000 shares was traded.

Five issues set new peaks. Fitz Simons & Connell Dredge and Dock reached a peak of 14½, then closed at 14¼, up 1. Peter Fox Brewing touched 13 and dropped back to finish at 12¾, up ⅝. Minneapolis Brewing closed at 7⅝, up ⅝. Aetna Ball Bearing finished at 8¾, up ¼. Quaker Oats preferred rose 4 to 157.

Among volume leaders, Commonwealth Edison gained ⅝ to 27¾. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock gained ⅞ at 26¾. Zenith Radio advanced ⅜ to 20⅛. Marshall Field eased ¼ at 14⅛. Middle West closed unchanged at 8⅛.

Bank Stocks.

Stocks of leading Chicago banks advanced $1 to $5 yesterday in listless trading, dealers reported. Other issues were stationary. Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust and Harris Trust and Savings shares gained $1; Chicago Title and Trust, $2, and Northern Trust, $5.

FURNITURE SHOW SALES ARE PUT AT 85 MILLIONS

Business Done in Chicago Above Year Ago.

Officials of the American Furniture Mart and Merchandise Mart estimated yesterday that $85,000,000 worth of furniture and home furnishings have been sold during Chicago's January wholesale furniture market, which concludes today. The market, which was held concurrently at both marts during the last two weeks, was attended by buyers from retail furniture stores in all parts of the country. It was not open to the public.

Dr. Alfred P. Haake reports Texans best furniture buyers.

Buyers attending the show at the Merchandise Mart purchased approximately 35 per cent more furniture this year than they did at the January 1938 show. Sales at the American Furniture Mart were 20 to 25 per cent better than a year ago.

Executives of both marts said that buyers from the southwest, especially from Texas, made particularly heavy purchases this January. Dr. Alfred P. Haake, managing director of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, verified this report.

Texas Busines Improves.

"Furniture makers have made large sales to buyers from stores in the principal Texas cities," Dr. Haake said. "I believe that these heavy sales were caused by a good December furniture business in Texas, which further depleted inventories which already were very low."

Buyers from Texas stores, interviewed at the market, said their heavy purchases were due to improved business conditions in the Lone Star state. All were enthusiastic about prospects for 1939.

Retail furniture sales in Texas during November made a better showing than in many other states. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reported that 60 independent retail stores in that state had sales which were 2 per cent above those of November, 1937.

Sales In Other States.

During the same month in Ohio independent furniture dealers reported sales were off 6.8 per cent from a year ago. In Pennsylvania they were down 4.7 per cent; in Massachusetts, 0.6 per cent; in Iowa, 4.1 per cent, and in California, 6 per cent. In Georgia, however, retail furniture sales were 14.6 per cent better than in November, 1937.

Buyers' attendance at the market this January broke all previous attendance records, it was said. The Merchandise Mart reported that 10,383 buyers had registered up to last night. The previous high mark in registration, made in January a year ago, was 10,029. At the American Furniture Mart 10,550 buyers had registered up to last night, compared with the previous high, also made in 1937, of 10,431.

EXTRA DIVIDEND VOTED BY GREAT LAKES DREDGE CO.

Silex Adds Five Cents to Regular Payment.

The Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company of Chicago and the Silex company, makers of coffee utensils, declared extra dividends in addition to regular quarterly disbursements yesterday.

The dredging company announced it will pay 25 cents a share in addition to the quarterly payment of 25 cents on the common stock Feb. 15 to stockholders of record Feb. 3. On Nov. 15 the company distributed $1 and on Dec. 22 it paid 75 cents in extras.

The Silex company declared an extra dividend of 5 cents and the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents on the common stock. Both dividends will be paid Feb. 10 on stock of record Jan. 31. The firm paid an extra of 5 cents on Nov. 10.

Dividends declared yesterday with payment and record dates follow:

Payment on Arrears.

American Hide and Leather company. Declared a quarterly dividend of 75c and 25c on arrears on the 6% preferred stock. The disbursement will be made March 31 on stock of record March 17. Arrears after payment will total $2 a share.

Associated Telegraph and Telephone company. Declared dividend of 49 cents on the 7% first preferred and 42 cents on the $6 first preferred, payable Feb. 15 on the stock of record Feb. 1. Similar amounts were paid in previous quarter. Arrears on the 7% preferred will total $40.11 after payment, and on the 6%, $34.38.

Northern States Power company of Delaware. Declared dividends of $1.31¼ on the 7% cumulative preferred and $1.12½ on the 6% cumulative preferred, payable Feb. 20 on stock of record Jan. 31. Paid same amounts on Jan. 20. Arrears after payment on the 7% preferred will total $3.06¼ and on the 6% preferred, $2.62½.

Deferred Payment.

Leonard Ginsberg, president of the Hearn Department stores announced that because the company had operated at a loss for the last year, the directors decided to defer the quarterly dividend of 75c on the 6% cumulative preferred.

The letter "q" in the table refers to regular quarterly payments.

INTEREST ON SAVINGS.

Investors' Guide: Is there a limit on the rate of interest that member banks of the federal reserve system can pay on savings deposits? If so, who sets it?—A. W. J. R.

Answer: Yes, the maximum rate is 2½ per cent on savings deposits, established by the federal reserve board. Most savings banks are now paying less than the maximum on savings.

"THE GARDEN."

Investors' Guide: Who operates the Madison Square Garden in New York? With all the sporting events that are held there, I should think the Garden would make some money. If information on profits is available, please tell me something about them. Where, if at all, can the stock be bought?—H. R. M.

Answer: The "Garden" is operated by the Madison Square Garden corporation and has proved to be a money-maker. Attendance at sports events and other large scale entertainments has brought a steady upturn in earnings in the last five years. The corporation's only depression loss was in 1934, when net loss of $59,000 was reported.

Besides its exhibition hall, where indoor athletic meets and all kinds of expositions are held, the corporation owns an outdoor arena on Long Island. It was built in 1931, seats 75,000, and is known as the "Madison Square Garden Bowl." The grand arena of the indoor hall seats 18,500.

Net income in the year ended May 31, 1938, amounted to $455,000 or $1.62 a common share, compared with $348,000 and $253,000 in the two preceding fiscal years. In the six months to Nov. 30, 1938, first half of the current fiscal year, the corporation had net income of $8,056 against net loss of $28,850 in the corresponding period the year before. Midwinter months normally bring a seasonal rise in profits.

Common dividends ranging from 30 cents in 1935 to $1.65 in 1938 were paid after omission from 1932 through 1934. You may buy the stock through a broker. It is listed on the New York Stock exchange.

NOT RELATED.

Investors' Guide: What is the relationship, if any, between the Inland Steel company and the Molybdenum Corporation of America? Both have offices at 38 South Dearborn street, Chicago.—H. R.

Answer: The two companies are not related to each other in any way. They have separate offices in the same building.
